Relief Bill Is Given Approval in House and Sent to Senate

Plan Bars Aid to Aliens; Quick Passage Indicated

1,900,000 JOBS

WPA Chief to Explain Provisions to House Subcommittee

Washington—(P)—A $1,111,754,916 relief program for the unemployed, which the House passed today, will be sent to the Senate today, where it is expected to pass as quickly as it did in the House.

With a view to expediting action, Colonel F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, was asked to explain the provisions to an appropriations subcommittee Monday.

The bill, as approved 354 to 21 by the House last night, would exclude relief to aliens, communists and Nazi members, and would authorize $975,650,000 for the WPA in the eight months starting July 1. Most of the present restrictions against wasting relief money were renewed.

Experts estimated that the bill would provide jobs for an average of 1,000,000 persons a month, compared with the 1940 average of 2,042,000 and a peak of about 3,000,000 in 1936.

Accept 11 Amendments
Only 11 of 73 proposed amendments were accepted by the Democratic majority. As the weary members yawned for adjournment, they defeated a motion of Representative Taber (R-N. Y.) to substitute state and county administration for the present federal relief program.

Representative Collins (D-Miss.) proposed a $10,000,000 fund to start a $60,000,000 public buildings program, but it was rejected, 154 to 50. Representative Hobbs (D-Ala.) had told his colleagues in support of the plan.

"It will put at least one federal building in every congressional district in the United States."

Then Representative Voorhis (D-Calif.), recalling that the WPA heavy construction program would end in a few months, demanded a $500,000,000 appropriation to revive it. He lost, 110 to 26.

Fight 'Fifth Column'
Washington—(P)—Congress and government agencies joined today in a widespread attempt to uncover and stamp out subversive "fifth column" activities which might jeopardize the nation's security.

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson called on the public to cooperate by reporting to the federal bureau of investigation "acts, threats or evidence of sabotage, espionage or other disloyal activities."

Senator Byrd (D-Va.) urged that Congress lose no time in passing "drastic and compulsory legislation requiring a complete registration of every person in America who is not today a legalized citizen."

FBI Active
At a press conference yesterday, Jackson said President Roosevelt had prepared many months ago to cope with "fifth column" activities and that the FBI has "capably, zealously and effectively carried out its task."

Although he declined to disclose the nature of the measures adopted, the attorney general said that the FBI would be enlarged if necessary to deal with subversive activities. He added that if Congress approves the transfer of the immigration service from the labor department, it would be made a separate unit like the FBI.

2 Murder Ring Leaders Will Be Sent to Chair
New York—(P)—Harry "Happy" Malone and Frank "The Dasher" Abbandando, satellites of Brooklyn's broken murder ring, must die in Sing Sing prison's electric chair for the strangulation-ice pick slaying three years ago of police informer George Rudnick.

A jury convicted them of first-degree murder yesterday after deliberating two and a half hours. The two men will go before Judge Franklin Taylor Monday to hear the mandatory death sentence.

A System to Watch Watchmen
A "supervisory system for watchmen," which watches watchmen while they watch, has just been patented! The system rings an alarm if the watchman doesn't make his rounds within a certain time. John Derby of Scarsdale, N. Y., is the inventor. So, no more loafing while on-the-watch. When you'd like to find out how many people watch watchmen, insert one in The Post-Crescent and watch the response pour in. Today's result story again proves how they work:

MAN—Wanted for general farm work. Married man preferred. Extra house. Call Seymour 17374 or write Z-24, Post-Crescent.

Had 25 calls and had desired results after third insertion of ad.

FRENCH GENERAL SALUTES NAZI CAPTORS
According to German caption, this picture, sent by radio from Berlin to New York, shows French General Henri Giraud (second from right) touching his distinctive French cap in salute as he faces his captors on German soil. General Giraud, who was captured early in the World war of 1914-18, but escaped, was in command of the French Ninth army when he was reported captured, three days before this picture was received.

Italy Aims Futile Allied Offers to Stay Out of War

Rome—(P)—Futile allied offers of concessions to Premier Mussolini in the hope of keeping Italy non-belligerent were reported today in Italian quarters.

With Italy observing the anniversary of her entrance into the World war 25 years ago today, unofficial observers said the French secretly offered her special rights in Tunisia, credit facilities through the Suez canal and a free port at Jibuti, French Somaliland. Jibuti is the only rail outlet to Italy's Ethiopian empire.

Britain has been negotiating for an arrangement to lift the allied blockade in the Mediterranean for Italy.

Mussolini, however, was quoted as saying the concessions are "too little and too late."

Some Italians more than half-expected Premier Mussolini to celebrate today's anniversary by announcing that Italy finally is ready to strike for attainment of her long-heralded territorial aspirations.

No Hint on Move
There were no surface indications of the exact time or place of Italy's leap. Most guesses were that it would be against France or Yugoslavia, against both of whom Italy has filed territorial claims.

Italians have clamored for Corsica, French island off Italy's west coast, and for French possessions in Africa. Claims against Yugoslavia, less emphasized, concern chiefly Dalmatia, the section of the country along the Adriatic north of Italy's newly-acquired Albania.

Italy, linked by a "pact of steel" to Germany, against whom she fought in the World war, today faced her former allies, France and Great Britain, with bitter claims that they had cheated her of her share of the spoils in the last conflict.

12 Dead and 1,200 Injured in Quake
Lima, Peru—(P)—A one-minute earthquake that shook Lima and other Peruvian cities today was reported to have taken at least 34 lives and injured more than 1,200.

Peruvian Capital and Seaport Suffer Heavy Damage
Lima, Peru—(P)—Twelve persons were reported killed in Lima and more than 1,200 injured, some seriously, when the Peruvian capital was shaken for one minute by a strong earthquake today.

From nearby Callao, Lima's seaport six miles to the west, came word that two schoolhouses had collapsed, killing two children and injuring several others.

Numerous houses in Lima and Callao were shaken down and several historic buildings were damaged, including the sixteenth century Lima cathedral built over the tomb of Pizarro, the city's founder.

Marines and sailors landed from warships at Callao to patrol the streets. The population of Callao and Lima were thrown into a panic. Many of the injured here were cared for at hastily-improvised first-aid stations.

Advices from nearby seaport reports said the earthquake wrought terrific damage, especially at Chorrillos, which consisted mostly of old houses.

A witness of the Chorrillos destruction said streets were rendered impassable by debris from fallen houses.

At Lima, nearly half of the city's stone-walled buildings were cracked. Two towers of Lima cathedral were damaged, one leaning at a dangerous angle.

Demands Recount in Census at Two Rivers
Two Rivers—(P)—City Manager E. J. Donnelly, not satisfied with Two Rivers' new population figure of 10,251, has demanded a recount. Donnelly maintained the population figure should have shown a greater increase than 168 over the 1930 figures.

Roosevelt Outlines Plans to Give Basic Training as Pilots To 50,000 in Next Fiscal Year
Washington—(P)—President Roosevelt disclosed plans today to give basic training as pilots to 50,000 men in the 12 months beginning July 1.

Through the civil aeronautics authority, he said, three months of primary training in flying will be provided. While not all those who take the course will be finished material for the army and navy air forces, the president asserted, they can be incorporated in various reserves.

He told his press conference that Congress would be asked for a supplementary appropriation to handle the pilot training program.

In contrast with the large expansion contemplated in pilot training, the chief executive noted that in the present fiscal year, ending June 30, basic training would have been provided for 10,000 individuals.

Those who will take the basic training, the chief executive said, will come from three sources:

1. The 435 colleges and schools now cooperating with the CAA in providing training; also other schools which desire to come into the program.

2. A large group of citizens who have pilot licenses or have had them and permitted them to lapse.

3. Men in the age group of 18 to 25 years who are not in college but want to make themselves available for the aviation service if they are called upon.

Back of the program, Mr. Roosevelt said, will be a group of able

Business Chiefs In Full Support Of Defense Plan

Declare 'Our Very Lives And Liberties May Be Involved'

Washington—(P)—American business leaders, mobilizing their vast resources on the industrial front, pledged the national defense program unserved cooperation today for a task in which they said "our very lives and liberties may be involved."

After a round of conferences on production problems, more than fifty members of Secretary Hopkins' business advisory council went to the White House late yesterday to give President Roosevelt assurances of "full aid."

They spent almost an hour with the president, discussing methods for accelerating production of defense essentials and also the necessity of guarding against a rise in living costs.

The delegation saw Mr. Roosevelt not long after the senate approved unanimously the $1,473,796,728 navy bill, thus completing the chamber's action on the main emergency defense program. The $1,823,254,624 army measure was passed Wednesday.

Bills Up Next Week
Both measures will be taken up next week in the house after acting today on a bill to remove the 6,000 top limit on army planes.

Elimination of industrial bottlenecks was a subject which figured recurrently in the government's continuing study of manufacturing resources, particularly with regard to aircraft engines.

Secretary Morgenthau, in charge of coordinating plane production, announced that plans were being worked out to standardize and spread the manufacture of warplanes and motors among many plants. A staff of aeronautical experts is being organized.

Former Postmaster At Kenosha Will Go To Federal Prison
Milwaukee—(P)—Charged with concealment of embezzlement and failure to report a felony, Aloysius W. Fries, 56, of Waukegan, Ill., former postmaster at Kenosha, was sentenced today by Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone to serve two concurrent terms of four months in federal prison.

Fries had pleaded nolo contendere to concealing embezzlement of $1,345 by Herbert C. Thomey, Sr., 52, Kenosha hardware merchant who operated a postal station.

Judge Stone sentenced Thomey to eight months in federal prison. Thomey had pleaded guilty to embezzling the money, which has been repaid.

Two companion cases were dismissed. One concerned Floyd C. Barber, 44, Kenosha postal employee who had pleaded innocent to concealing a felony. The charge was dropped on the ground that while Barber should have been more discreet, he acted under his postmaster's orders.

William Drinkwine, 48, a postal employee who had pleaded innocent to a charge of soliciting contributions for political purposes, also was discharged. A similar charge against Fries was dismissed.

Score 'Huge and Hasty' Military Expenditures
Madison—(P)—Unanimous opposition to entry of the United States in any foreign war and criticism of "huge and hasty" increases in military preparedness expenditures were expressed by a dozen speakers last night at a peace rally on the University of Wisconsin campus.

About 800 persons attended the outdoor meeting despite a drizzling rain. It was sponsored by the University Peace Federation and the student board.

Beverage Tax Division Investigator Quits Post
Madison—(P)—The resignation of Michael M. Rybicki, 45, of Stevens Point, an investigator for the state beverage tax division, was announced today by John W. Roach, division director. Shortly after Rybicki had been fined $10 in superior court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Allies Use Artillery and Infantry on Nazi Columns; Germans Enter Boulogne

British Admit Enemy Spearhead Holds Seaport in France
THREAT INCREASED
Mechanized Force Apparently in Advance From Abbeville

London—(P)—Germany has lost over 1,500 aircraft since Adolf Hitler's warriors invaded the Low Countries two weeks ago, the British air ministry reported today in a communique telling of fresh British aerial attacks at German forces fighting in France and Belgium.

London—(P)—Boulogne, France's strategic seaport, 20 minutes by air from London, has fallen to the German spearhead on the English channel coast, authoritative sources acknowledged today.

"The Germans took possession of Boulogne last night," they said. (At the time of this admission the Germans had not even claimed Boulogne—saying, rather, that their channel vanguard had passed the city, heading for Calais to the north-east.)

Prime Minister Churchill told parliament yesterday severe fighting was raging "around and in" Boulogne and that the fighting, a threat to British communications, had "implications of a serious character."

Today came word of the German seizure of the beautiful port city, whose population in peacetime numbered more than 50,000.

A spokesman said that virtually all the British troops at Boulogne "got away." He indicated that the Germans were able to seize the town because of their stronger forces.

26 Miles From Folkestone
He added, however, that he had no knowledge of the size of the German capturing force.

Boulogne, the point farthest west of the German sweep through the Low Countries and France in the 15-day-old "real war," is only 26 miles by boat from Folkestone, 105 miles by water from London and about 80 miles by air.

Boulogne was seized apparently by German mechanized columns.

Want Roosevelt To Clarify Stand
Republican Demands Rise As President Gets Majority of Delegates

Washington—(P)—As President Roosevelt's pledged and semi-pledged delegates to the Democratic convention reached a majority today, Republican demands arose that he state his third-term intentions in his Sunday night "fireside chat" on national defense.

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R-N. Y.) termed "absolutely sound" A. M. Landon's challenge that the president take himself out of the 1940 presidential picture if he expects Republicans to join his cabinet.

"I think the president should announce in his Sunday radio address whether he intends to run or not," Wadsworth said.

Wadsworth is national chairman of the Republican presidential campaign of Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, who also spoke out yesterday against the coalition idea in an interview here. After learning of the president's plans to speak Sunday night, Gannett said:

"I think the president should tell the people he is not going to use the defense program for his own political advantage."

Mr. Roosevelt's convention delegate went over the majority mark with the pledging yesterday of Vermont's six votes. This gives him commitments to 54 1/2 votes of the 1,094 to be cast.

Italian Liner's Sailing Delayed Until June 12
Rome—(P)—Sailing of the Italian liner Rex for New York has been postponed from May 29 to June 12, Italian line headquarters in Genoa said today. Asked the reason, line officials said "we do not know."

Berlin Asserts Nazi Troops Tighten Ring Around Allied Forces and Approach Calais

Berlin—(P)—Germany's ring of fire and steel around 500,000 to 1,000,000 allied soldiers in Flanders was reported today to have been drastically tightened when the Nazi divisions smashed through the Scheldt river fortifications and into Tournai and Ghent, in Belgium.

Fast-moving German armored cars driving through St. Omer this forenoon approached the "gates of Calais," authoritative German sources declared meanwhile.

Calais lies only 22 miles from Dover, vital channel port on the English side.

St. Omer, which was said to be in German hands, lies little more than 20 miles to the southeast of Calais, important channel port on the French side.

The high command declared that heavy attack forces, having broken through on the Scheldt river line, reached the western embankment of the Lys river, indicating the Lys also had been crossed.

Fighting in Ghent
This crossing, however, may have been at Ghent, where the Scheldt and Lys join. Authorized sources said that German and allied forces were fighting in the streets of historic Ghent, an important communications center, 30 miles northwest of Brussels, fallen Belgian capital.

The high command's daily communique did not mention Ghent, but said that Tournai, on the Scheldt, about 35 miles southwest of Ghent, had been taken.

"The region of northern France and Belgium wherein the enemy armies are encircled was yesterday further tightened by the successful attacks of German troops on all sides," said the high command.

"In Flanders German divisions broke through the fortified Scheldt position and advanced as far as the western embankment of the Lys."

Fortress Taken
The French fortress of Maubeuge which had been passed by the German sweep across the middle of the little Maginot line fronting on Belgium also was taken—the occupation completed yesterday with the capture of the last fortified works.

In the Artois region, north of the narrow neck of the German corridor to the channel coast, German troops were said to have stormed and conquered Lorette heights. These stand northwest of Arras. They were hotly contested in the World war.

Formidable German armored forces which had been advancing between Arras and the sea to the north were said to be nearing the French channel ports.

"A weak enemy advance from the south toward Amiens (on the flank of the German spearhead to the channel) was repelled," said the high command.

The communique pictured widespread attacks on the allies from the air in which six loaded transports were sunk and "a large war vessel, which is probably a cruiser, and destroyers" were hit by heavy bombs off Boulogne.

Pensioners Victims Of False Leadership, Judge Informs Them
Milwaukee—(P)—One hundred seventy members of an old-age pension group were told today that they had been "the victims of false leadership."

The pensioners had crowded into County Judge Charles A. Hansen's court to petition for $10 increases in their pensions, which amount to a maximum of $30 a month.

Judge Hansen told them that there was no provision in the statutes for the type of appeal they were making and that the proper procedure was to appeal to the state department of public welfare from a ruling of the county department of old age assistance denying them an increase.

"You shouldn't have come in here like this," he added. "You might as well proceed legally and I cannot understand why your leaders haven't advised you correctly. They have filled you with a lot of hokum. . . . When I say that you have been the victims of false leadership, I mean it."

Boy, 13, Injured as Gun, Held by Chum, Fires Accidentally
Robert, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kersher, 124 W. Thirtieth street, Kaukauna, was seriously injured about 1:30 yesterday afternoon when a .22 calibre rifle held by a playmate accidentally fired. Robert, struck in the groin, was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital where his condition today was reported improved.

Robert and his chum, Henry Mathis, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mathis, 119 W. Thirtieth street, Kaukauna, had been at the Kaukauna dump near the east city limits where they were shooting rats. They were returning to their homes and Henry, who was ahead of Robert, had the rifle over his shoulder when it discharged accidentally.

Try to Plug Gap
The German troops were moving northward through the gap, which the French and their allies were attempting to plug.

The fighting next to the coast was described as "heavy" although the German detachments at Boulogne were still reported to be only "light effective."

The spokesman said there was little change since yesterday in the fighting in the Valenciennes-Cambrai-Arras area, where the French then claimed gains.

French, English and Belgian troops were said to have repulsed German attacks and themselves counter-attacked. The positions were said to have remained relatively the same overnight.

A high command communique unusually terse said the Somme river positions had been held firmly after a series of small French victories reducing German bridgeheads on the southern bank.

Beat Back Outposts
The French push into the southern sections of Amiens yesterday was maintained, the French spokesman said. French action was said to have thrown back German outposts and to have established strong French positions from which German units were being mopped up.

The Germans met with "little or no success" in fighting farther eastward south of Sedan near Attigny on the Aisne river, he reported.

The Nazi command, it was said, launched an attack with "perhaps a division" of troops after a tremendous artillery preparation had blasted the French lines.

Try to Turn Tide in Battle to Control Channel

HEAVY FIGHTING

Attempt to Cut Off German Army's Corridor to Sea

BULLETIN

Paris—(AP)—A war ministry spokesman announced tonight that French troops are holding the English channel port of Boulogne against attacks by German armored columns.

Other German light units have pushed northward and are fighting in the Calais region, the spokesman added.

Boulogne is 26 miles from England; Calais, 22, across the straits of Dover.

Basel, Switzerland—(P)—French army engineers blew up scores of locks on the Rhine-Rhone canal today, flooding hundreds of square miles of territory on the French side of the Rhine.

The canal runs from Strasbourg to Basel, and the locks formed a vital part of the Maginot line defenses. The release of the water may affect the level of the Rhine between the Maginot line and the German westwall forts from Suringue, where the canal begins, to Strasbourg, where that section of the waterway again empties into the Rhine.

The main locks and gates and canal entrance near Suringue were left partly standing, enabling the French still partly to control the water level.

The reason for destroying the locks was not immediately apparent. Some observers believed it was done to strengthen the Maginot defenses in this sector and to enable thousands of troops to leave for action in northwestern France.

Paris—(P)—French advance guards fought vigorously today against small German light units in the region of the English channel near Boulogne, a military spokesman said, while the battle of Flanders raged into its third day with sustained violence eastward in the vicinity of Valenciennes.

The allied armies caught German armored columns in an artillery crossfire in a new effort to cut the reich's corridor to the sea and turn the tide of the battle for mastery of the English channel.

Masses of allied infantry also were weighed down on the German salient, pressing south from Flanders field in the Cambrai region and north from the Somme river in a pincers movement designed to break off the spearhead which has twisted west to the channel coast.

This turn in the campaign brought into full play for the first time the two branches of the service in which the allies claim superiority.

The French spokesman acknowledged that the German infiltration to the Boulogne area, important channel port just 26 miles across the strait of Dover from Folkestone, England, was continuing through a 25-mile wide gap in the allied lines south of Arras in the vicinity of Bapaume.

Queen Wilhelmina Says She Left Holland to Avoid Being Captured and Held as Hostage
London—(P)—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands told newspapermen personally today that she left her invaded kingdom because the Germans were determined to capture her and hold her as a hostage.

"I decided that it was my duty to frustrate attempts of the enemy to take possession of my person as soon as it became apparent that these attempts could not be definitely checked," the refugee queen said. She came to London May 13.

"From the very beginning of hostilities the enemy has done everything in his power to capture me. Apparently he considered my person as a promising hostage with which to paralyze every resistance of my people in the Netherlands and overseas territories."

The monarch asserted that her dynasty "has led every struggle for freedom of the Netherlands and, as heir to our tradition, I have this duty to go wherever the Netherlands continue their fight for liberty."

"In the hands of the enemy I would have been powerless. As a captive of oppression I could not have been a rallying point nor an inspiration for my unhappy people. No Dutchman could have looked to his queen for hope and resurrection if she had been the prisoner of the enemy."

"I have deemed it my duty to choose the active leadership of a continued struggle at the head of my government. This struggle is being waged by Dutchmen who have escaped from the now-occupied territory and recruited abroad at the side of the allies; also by the Dutch fleet with its proud traditions which has been able to join allied fleets almost unscathed."

"It is my task to give leadership and confidence to these forces and to the Dutch people in overseas territories who are willing and keen to make any sacrifices for the liberation of the motherland."

Queen Wilhelmina Says She Left Holland to Avoid Being Captured and Held as Hostage

Says Republicans Are Opponents of Coalition System

People Want Two Parties Maintained, Governor Bricker Asserts

Indianapolis—(P)—Raymond E. Willis, Angola editor, 1938 Republican nominee for United States senator, was renominated by acclamation at the party's state convention today.

Shortly after nominating Willis, who lost a close race two years ago to Senator Frederick Van Nuys Democrat, the convention adopted a platform calling for "immediate abolition" of reciprocal trade treaties and favoring "the strongest defense required to make our shores secure against any conceivable attack by any foreign power."

Indianapolis—(P)—Republicans "don't want" a coalition national administration, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio declared today in the keynote address prepared for delivery at the Indiana Republican convention.

His speech was scheduled to open the convention to nominate candidates for U. S. senator, governor and nine other state offices.

Congressional district caucuses last night chose 24 of the state's delegates to the G. O. P. national convention at Philadelphia June 24 and four delegates-at-large were to be chosen by the full assembly.

Indications were that the Indiana delegation would not be instructed officially for any presidential candidate despite the endeavors of representatives of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan and Robert A. Taft of Ohio. Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney and Wendell L. Willkie, Indiana-born utilities head, to obtain

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will be one of Indiana's national convention delegates. He maintains his legal residence at his home town of Sullivan and was chosen to represent the seventh congressional district along with Homer Capelhart of Washington, Ind., whose cornfield conference last summer attracted Republicans from all parts of the nation.

Bricker, commenting on rumors that President Roosevelt might ask Republicans to join New Dealers in a coalition government because of the European war crisis, asserted: "The people of our country... want a system of two parties maintained, with local government taking charge of those problems which are local in character. They see a danger in a strong central government."

"We hear talk of a coalition government. We don't want it. We want the two parties maintained. We want a full and free discussion of issues. We want our people to decide the issues of this campaign."

"I want the Republican party to draft a clear platform stand on it and then carry it out. I want my party to nominate its own candidates. The Republican party is more able to deal sanely with foreign problems than the Democratic party, and we are the only party that can bring this nation out of domestic chaos."

Investigate Sale Of Dairy Company To Buckman Firm

Letter Refers to Concern As 'Goose That Is Laying Golden Egg'

Madison—(P)—A letter in which B. E. Buckman referred to the investment firm of which he was president as "the goose that is laying the golden egg" was read to a federal court jury yesterday in the trial of eight former officers and employees of the bankrupt company charged with mail fraud, conspiracy and securities law violations.

The letter was introduced during questioning of C. Hamilton Moses, of Little Rock, Ark., and C. S. Dawley, of Dallas, Texas, regarding sale of a controlling interest in Southwest Dairy Products company for $250,000 in December, 1934.

Moses testified he and Dawley accepted a down payment of $10,000, with an understanding they would receive a written guaranty on the balance, but that the stock was turned over to Continental Public Service company, a Buckman affiliate, without formal acknowledgment of their claims.

A letter from Buckman to Moses, dated March 11, 1936, stated in part: "On this guaranty business, you agreed with the writer to allow the Continental to take these notes over because it would affect (SIC) the Buckman company statement in such condition that it would make it insolvent, and that would kill the goose that is laying the golden egg."

The testimony of Dawley, who had been manager of the Southwest Dairy properties, was similar to that of Moses. These agreed it had been difficult to get a satisfactory settlement on the transaction.

NAZIS APPLY PINNERS TO ALLIES

The German blitzkrieg, having opened a gap in Allied lines between Arras and Bapaume, has captured Abbeville, 12 miles from the English channel, and advanced toward Boulogne, where heavy fighting occurred. The Nazi, according to German sources, sought to apply a pincer (black arrows) around an Allied force estimated at between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men. Germans claimed to have bombed the channel ports of Dunkerque, France, and Dover, England. As map shows, Boulogne is only 26 miles from England. London said the Germans had crossed the Scheldt river near Audenarde in another thrust toward the channel. Meanwhile, Paris said French were moving north near St. Quentin, attempting to meet Allied northern forces near Cambrai and pinch off (which arrows) the Nazi western spearhead. Germany admitted some forts at Namur, Belgium, still were holding out.

War Situation Today

Allied artillery raked advancing German armored columns with a devastating cross-fire in the battle of Flanders today as other Nazi legions struck at the "gates of Calais"—only 22 miles from Dover, England—and captured the strategic French seaport of Boulogne.

With the mastery of the English channel at stake, the allies hurled masses of infantry against the German salient at its bottleneck, between Cambrai and the River Somme.

It was the first time in the 35-day-old campaign that the two branches of the service in which the allies claim superiority, infantry and artillery, were thrown into full play.

Away to the south, in France, the Germans hailed bombs on the Paris-Rouen railway in an attempt to cut off the French capital from the important harbor of Le Havre.

German capture of Boulogne—France's strategic seaport, just 20 minutes by air from London—was admitted in authoritative London quarters today.

The sweeping Nazi rush to the sea, preliminary to a heralded invasion of England, also gained in two other smashing blows.

German mechanized troops were reported in Berlin to have advanced to within close reach of Calais—the "gateway" French channel port only 22 miles from Dover, England—while another Nazi force grappled in fierce fighting with allied troops in the streets of Ghent, Belgium.

The trend of battle in the critical struggle for mastery of the English channel veered rapidly north, with the Germans striking hard for the shortest direct jumping-off base for England—at Calais.

In so doing, Hitler's armored legions simultaneously tightened the steel trap on between 500,000 and 1,000,000 allied troops "pocketed" in northern France and Belgium.

The Germans also reported the fall of the last allied-held forts in Maubeuge, France, just south of the Belgian border. Tournai was declared captured.

A Paris radio broadcast said 5,000 German mechanized troops were "isolated" in the bitterly-contested Amiens sector—on the south prong of the Nazi pincer—and that other German forces in Flanders had "stalled" from lack of fuel.

Tension in the Mediterranean increased meanwhile as a fascist youth official declared Italy was "on the eve of our war" to break the British-manned gates of Gibraltar and Suez.

Rome shipping circles heard that the scheduled sailing of the Italian lined Rex from Genoa on May 29 had been indefinitely postponed—a possible tip-off on Italian war plans.

It appeared that Premier Mussolini's "zero hour" for striking—presumably into Yugoslavia—might coincide with the start of a German invasion of England.

In their effort to squeeze shut a giant pincer through the middle of the Nazi salient, the allies had a start, however small, through dents driven on the north and south from the Somme and Flanders—precious gains achieved in the war's greatest battles.

British, French and Belgian forces smashed against the salient, defended by a thin line of Nazi motorized troops, from the north on the outskirts of Cambrai, where the German-held territory narrows to a bottleneck.

Matching the furious ground fighting, Britain's air force reported destruction of a Nazi ammunition train on the Dutch-German border and a successful attack with 100 high explosive bombs on an armored division headquarters.

Revolutionary War 'Fifth Columnists' Known as 'Cowboys'

Chicago—(P)—"Fifth columnists" aren't peculiar to modern warfare; in America's revolutionary war they were known as "cowboys."

So says Dr. Woodford A. Hefflin, research associate in English at the University of Chicago.

"During the Revolutionary war," he said, "Tory sympathizers used to ring cowbells in the woods and brush in order to attract the revolutionists. The latter, thinking of cows to be captured for food, would rush into the trap to be subdued or slain. The traitors were called 'cowboys' because of their bells."

Battle of Flanders Likely To Decide Outcome of War; Allies Stiffen Resistance

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(P)—The battle of Flanders, which has grown out of the allied counter-attack in the Somme region, has developed far enough so we can see that the outcome of the blitzkrieg likely depends upon it.

A blitzkrieg is no stronger than any of its component parts. It is far too soon for us to be able to forecast the end of this fierce and bloody phase of the German invasion, but allied reports this morning indicated that they were doing well.

If the allies suffered disorganization and lowered resistance in the first grim days of the Nazi onslaught, those deficiencies appeared to have been repaired in marked degree.

Fighting was proceeding today all along the great line of invasion, but there are only two main engagements with which we need concern ourselves, and we shall save ourselves confusion if we stick to these. They are:

Try To Close Gap

1. The battle of Flanders, in which the allies are trying to close the gap which separates the forces in Belgium and extreme northern France from their colleagues to the south.

2. The conflict for mastery of the channel ports.

Let's look at the battle of Flanders first. What is happening is this:

There is a gap 25 miles wide in the allied defensive line in the general region of Arras and Bapaume. It is through this gap that the Germans have been pouring mechanized units which have raced to the coast.

The Germans haven't broken through here in force. The motorcycle, tank and armored car units which have passed through don't comprise many men, but they are fast and they are powerful.

However, this gap has separated the allied forces and gravely endangered the British, Belgians and French armies in Belgium and just inside the French border. These northern allies are in a net which still affords some openings but has been drawing closer.

Two Main Purposes

The battle of Flanders is essentially for two purposes. One is to close this gap, reunite the allied line and thus save the great army of the north.

The other is to prevent the Germans from pouring reinforcements through that gap to the coast, and at the same time the allies hope to cut off those Nazi mechanized units which already have gone through.

Reports this morning indicated that both the northern and the southern allies had been making some progress and were fighting well.

In the channel fighting the Germans have captured Abbeville, where the Somme empties into the sea.

London this morning announced that the great port of Boulogne also had fallen to the Nazis—a grievous blow to the allies as it is one of the principal ports of communication between England and the continent.

Turning Left Wing

Meanwhile German forces were turning the allied left wing in northern Belgium and pushing for the ports of Ostend, Dunkerque and Calais.

You can see that the battle of Flanders and the fighting for the channel ports are in a large measure interdependent.

If the Nazis get the rest of the channel ports and are able to consolidate their positions in force, the invasion of England—Hitler's great ambition—will be at hand.

We shall see the first great battle of history between warships and airplanes in the English channel.

We shall learn whether airplanes can smash the British navy.

Signs multiply that this blitzkrieg is Hitler's supreme gamble. He is pouring into this time offensive every resource which he has with the idea of getting a quick decision, because he can't stand a long war.

Virtually every thrust he makes is in the superlative degree of daring. He has taken the last word in blitzkrieg methods as evolved by others and has multiplied it by 10.

Every once in a blue moon some daring adventurer, who is willing to risk everything he possesses, breaks the bank at Monte Carlo. He succeeds by sheer audacity where scores of thousands fail.

Herr Hitler is out to break the bank at Monte Carlo. He has made it clear that he believes he is divinely ordained to carry out his program for the fatherland. His disciples further maintain that he is ordained to correct the faults of all Europe and even of the whole world.

The German high command follows him blindly as he gives his orders. The troops are imbued with his utter faith in himself. Suicide squads of parachute troops willingly launch themselves out into the unknown, and suicide mechanized squads go tearing off into the blue to do or die, far separated from the main body of Nazi troops.

Because this is a huge gamble which must come off now or never, Hitler is free to destroy industrial plants and other valuable property behind the allied lines. Why not? It deprives the allies of immediate support, and he won't need these plants to help him win the war. He will have won or lost in the next few weeks on what resources he already has.

Every move in the German drive and the lavishness with which the foe is tossing his supplies and manpower onto the green battle-speaks speed.

Speed—that's what counts. He's burning up his gas and other vital supplies as in a blast furnace. Why not? Nothing will matter after that's gone. It's victory now, or never.

Fight Bill Aimed At "Oppressive" Labor Practices

Wiley Sides With Senate Group Opposing Legislation

Washington—(P)—Senator Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) sided with the senate group which sharply criticized yesterday proposed legislation to outlaw "oppressive labor practices" in interstate industry.

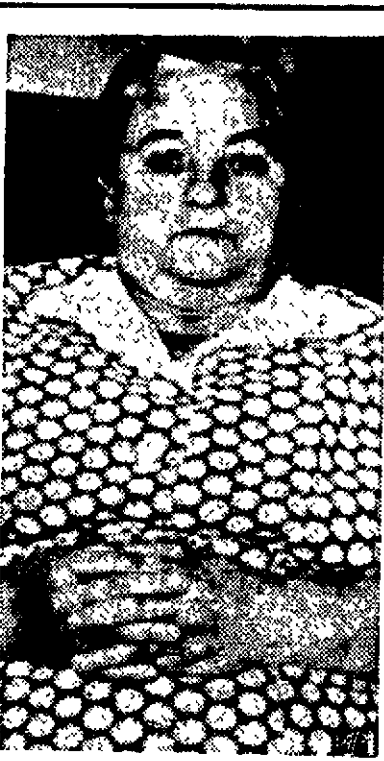

Members of both major parties criticized the bill—which would outlaw labor spies, strike breakers, armed guards and possession of industrial munitions—on grounds it might slow up the national defense program and grant to the secretary of labor a "life or death" power over business.

Wiley contended that the legislation would provide "opportunity for the labor department to crucify and persecute business."

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr. (P-Wis.) chairman of the senate civil liberties committee which recommended the measure, argued, however, that it should be passed because the "first requisite of a nation prepared to defend itself is a contented and united people."

Elaborates Stand

"This country is in a vulnerable and helpless position if it has to depend on private detective agencies for investigation of subversive ac-

CHOOSES JAIL

Mrs. Augusta Gasek (above), an apartment house operator in Bismarck, N. D., has vowed she'll remain in jail rather than pay her former husband $10 a month alimony, as specified in their 1935 divorce settlement. She contended her husband was able to support himself as a carpenter.

activities in industry," LaFollette declared.

Wiley stated that he felt the measure would not affect the "strike beggar" and would permit outside labor agitators to come into a town or state and cause trouble.

Laboring men would not favor the measure, Wiley asserted, if they understood that it would not stop labor spies and that the "public welfare" would not be served.

Wiley also attacked the Wagner law and the labor relations board, and said he believed complaints against the act were caused by its administration. He stated that the employing cause of complaint was the employing by the NLRB of trial examiners without court experience.

RENAME MILWAUKEE MAN

William Newburg of Chicago was elected vice president and Frank A. Chambers of Chicago was re-named secretary-treasurer.

German Leader Says 'Odds Greatly in Our Favor' in Drive Toward Port Cities

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER

With the German Western Armies—(P)—General Georg von Kuechlen, commander-in-chief of the German army driving at the Belgian coast port of Ostend by way of Ghent and Bruges, declared today "the odds are greatly in our favor."

While his forces were engaging the allies in a severe battle a few miles away, Von Kuechlen told me: "Our enemies are resisting bravely. But we are cutting our way to the sea and expect to be there shortly."

"We have inundations and other difficulties of terrain to contend with. Nevertheless, the odds are greatly in our favor."

Von Kuechlen, commander of the German forces in the Antwerp sector, told me his army's immediate objective was to get control of the Ghent canal.

"That will happen shortly," he said, and added, "a stern battle is on at Ghent."

(Presumably the canal referred to is that running from Ghent to Bruges and from there to the sea at Ostend, 65 miles from the southeast coast of England.)

Fighting For Ports

One of Von Kuechlen's adjutants disclosed that, simultaneously with this drive, another German army under General Walther von Reichenau is striving to reach the French channel ports of Calais and Dunkerque.

The army we are with is well-supplied by the air arm. We see sukpas (dive-bombers) and heavy bombers roaring overhead in an almost unbroken stream. Today, for the first time since entering the western zone of operations, I stood on an airport facing England—location not revealable—only 30 minutes from Britain as a Messerschmitt flies.

This field was reserved for Messerschmitts. We saw 27 of these swift fighters, hidden by a camouflage of branches or by being pushed back into the woods fringing the field.

Naval Officers Present

But in addition to air force and army officers, we also have seen naval officers hastening back and forth in this area.

That fact speaks volumes. These men are here for business.

ELAINE AND KEN BUESING WIN COLLEGE AWARDS
A brother and a sister from Appleton won two of the three major awards at Lawrence college Class day exercises this morning in Memorial chapel.
Elaine Buesing, (left) daughter of Mrs. George Buesing, 221 E. Roosevelt street, was awarded the Junior Spade voted annually to the outstanding junior girl. Her brother, Ken Buesing, (center) won the Spector cup for his record as a student leader and athlete at Lawrence. Jack White, (right) was named winner of the Junior Spoon, given each spring to the outstanding Junior man.

Brother, Sister Awarded College Class Day Honors

Kenneth, Elaine Buesing
Of Appleton Win Three Of Five Trophies

Kenneth Buesing and his young sister, Elaine, son and daughter of Mrs. George H. Buesing, 221 E. Roosevelt street, took three of the five honors awarded at the annual Lawrence college senior class day exercises this morning at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

A distinction won by only two other Lawrence men in the last 10 years, the earning of nine letters in sports, entitled Mr. Buesing to one of the two "L" blankets presented by President Thomas N. Barrows. Buesing won three letters in each football, basketball and track. Buesing was called to the rostrum again amid the thunderous applause of his schoolmates when President Barrows announced that a vote of students and faculty members had awarded him the Spector cup, given annually to that member of the senior class who best exemplifies those qualities, physical, mental and moral, which go to make up the well-rounded student. His sister, Elaine, received the spade given annually to the outstanding junior girl. The award was made by Miss Mary White, Appleton, last year's winner.

The large wooden spoon given each year to the outstanding junior man was presented by Kenneth Buesing, last year's winner, to Jack White, Chicago.

Miss Buesing, a member of Mortar Board, is president of the Women's Athletic association and also of her sorority, Alpha Chi Omega. Mr. White was recently elected president of the student body. A former editor-in-chief of the Lawrence college weekly, he is also a member of the capella choir and the interfraternity choir.

Cape Gets Blanket
The other "L" blanket awarded this morning went to Wellington Cape, Appleton, who has won six letters, three each in track and basketball. He was captain of the basketball team last season.

The Charles Champion cup given to "the best all-around college man" on the basis of athletic ability, scholarship and college spirit and loyalty will not be awarded until after the examinations, Dr. Barrows announced.

The rest of the morning's program was devoted to the class prophecy, read by Robert Wilson, Chicago. It was written in the form of a newspaper, the "1950 News," and in its personal, theatrical and front page news columns were found items about all members of the class of 1940 will be doing in 1950.

A front page story, for example, announced that Robert Hugh Arnold, Wausau, student who has been majoring in geology, was lauded for his discoveries during the Me-

Two Youths Fined on Charges of Speeding

Two persons pleaded guilty of speeding and were fined by Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court yesterday afternoon and this morning. Walter Unmuth, 17, 1028 W. Wisconsin avenue, was fined $15 and costs yesterday afternoon. He had been fined on a similar charge April 28. LeRoy Sather, 26, 805 N. Lave street, was fined $10 and costs this morning. Sather was charged with speeding with a motorcycle.

C. E. Piper, Deerfield, Ill., charged with failure to stop for an arterial, had a plea of guilty entered for him and paid a fine of $5 and costs.

Wayne Rogers Winner Of Club Word Contest

Wayne Rogers won a word contest conducted during the meeting of the Happy Hour club of the sixth grade of Roosevelt school Thursday afternoon. Dolores Radtke played the piano and Rudy Cherkasky presented a clarinet solo. Tricks were presented by Paul Jahnke, Rogers, Cherkasky, Richard Reetz, and Elaine Krabbe. Richard Reetz was program chairman and the club selected Ramona Jury to plan the program of the next meeting.

grey-Timeseyer expedition to the stratosphere. He had discovered that the Megreia horse-captain mogro could be de-aging and put to work drilling rocks, the story said.

Edwin Richard Bayley, Appleton student whose major subject was English, was reported in the 1939 paper as assisting Prof. Dorothy Bethurum with "Jungle Five Arrangements of Shakespearean Madrigals."

Tiger Blood for Teams
Jon William Calhoun, Elmira, Ill., who has been majoring in biology at Lawrence was mentioned in the "1950 News" as Dr. William Calhoun, who was recently dropping from the American Medical association after it was discovered he had been injecting tiger blood in the Lawrence college football teams.

Coach Bernie Hecolton was quoted in the story as saying that everything would have been all right if Richard Gaveys, son hadn't clawed up an Army tackle and devoured the left side of the Notre Dame line.

Miss Ruth Lundin, Ironwood, Mich., Miss Jane Houli, Chicago and Miss Ruth Radtke, Elmira, Ill., were awarded gold medals for good housekeeping. It was reported in the personal column.

A large number of students were mentioned in the theatrical columns and others made up the personnel of a cops and robbers story emanating from Chicago.

Sentiment for Selling Planes To Allies on Credit Has Grown Since Germans Began Offensive

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. — The Nazi blitzkrieg with the resulting grave military situation in France has increased substantially the number of American voters willing to supply the Allies with airplanes on credit if they cannot pay cash.

When the Nazi invasion began, some leaders here suggested removing all bans on credit to England and France, while a few even thought we should give them whatever war supplies they need free of charge. Thus far the British have not exhausted their supply of money, but under the conditions of modern total warfare some observers feel Britain's ready cash may not last many months longer.

The semi-final returns of a public poll begun May 15, five days after the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium, show that a slight majority of voters favor selling the Allies warplanes on credit, if they cannot pay cash.

"If England and France are unable to pay cash for airplanes they buy in this country, do you think we should sell them planes on credit supplied by our government?"

Yes 51% No 49% Nearly everyone approached on the issue had a definite opinion. Only one in every 16 (6 per cent) was undecided.

The results represented a growing trend of sentiment toward the granting of credit. In April when the public was polled on a similar issue, only 34 per cent were in favor of granting credit, 66 per cent opposed—a contrast to the much more even division of sentiment today.

Many fear it will drag us to war. Opposition to granting credit rests largely on the fear that loans, credits, or financial commitments may get the United States into war. Two voters in the poll expressed views typical of the whole opposition group when they said:

"If our money is over there, we will be over there too" and "Loans were really responsible for getting us into the last war."

Others objected to sales on credit because the Allies "haven't paid their last war debts," and because the United States needs warplanes and other materials here at home.

Among voters who think the United States should sell to the Allies on credit the principal reasons have to do with self-defense. "It is better to give them planes on credit," said one typical voter, "than to go to war ourselves." Others pointed out that if such credits "keep the Allies going, we may be able to stay out ourselves." Another group expressed the view that if the United States values world freedom it must be prepared to help pay for it. One voter added:

"If Germany wins, the money won't be worth anything anyway."

Plans are Outlined For Memorial Day

Weyauwega — Eric Arndt post of the American Legion has prepared a program for Memorial day next Thursday, May 30, which will be presented at the city square at 9:30 in the morning.

The Rev. M. Hensel, pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church, Weyauwega, will be the speaker of the day, and the complete program follows:

Music, high school band; prayer, the Rev. Mr. Hensel; song, "God Bless America," first grade; pledge to the flag, first grade; recitation, "Memorial Day," Betty Brewster; recitation, "Our Flag," Donald Lautenschlager; recitation, "The Bravery of Richard Kirtland," Ada Gehrke; Decoration day address, Mr. Hensel; firing squad salute to soldier dead; taps, Philip Baxter and Jack Nienuhas; "The Star Spangled Banner," high school band.

cided to hold a picnic for members of the band early in June at Green Bay.

Battery Charger Is Stolen at Weyauwega

Weyauwega — Someone stole the battery charger off the wall of the city hall where the fire trucks are housed, and the department is going to have difficulty charging truck batteries, unless it is returned. The charger has been missing since last week, according to C. D. McCarthy, fire chief, who suggests that the chap who took the charger either return it, pronto, or else come back and get the batteries or the trucks—or both.

Now Pegler Says the CIO Isn't Lily White Either

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Some members and officers of the American Federation of Labor, including Will Green, have thought that certain of these dispatches, dealing with corruption in the labor movement and oppression of union members and non-union workers by crooked union leaders, have tended to favor the CIO. The explanation is that the CIO appears to be comparatively, although not entirely free of the influence of underworld gorillas. The CIO has its vices, but they do not include to an important degree racketeering by common criminals or exploitation of the membership by officers who are clean only in the sense that they have never been convicted by their juries. These faults are serious in the A. F. of L. and will be deadly unless the leaders face the question and reform this year.

For the sake of the record however, and the solace of the A. F. of L. in a very embarrassing situation it may be observed that John L. Lewis served in the A. F. of L. a long time, that his reasons for breaking away were political and personal and that he never fought hoodlumism when he was in and has ignored it as an issue since he got out.

The gorillas and the technically respectable officers of the labor movement have found the A. F. of L. home-like because the field was pioneered long ago. In Chicago and elsewhere, but conspicuously in Chicago, traitorous officials sold out or otherwise exploited their members for many a year before repeal turned the banditti of the Sicilian union and the vice business to the field of unionism.

But the CIO is new and heavily infested with Communists, and the hold long meetings and talk and ordinary direct-action stick-up man resolve for hours to work the "sit" and leg-breaker can't cope with Joe Stuchkov of Moscow, and them. They get in your hair. They are always wanting to vote on something or asking what became of the money. That is to say, they always want to know where the money went when they are not in control. They often exercise minority control, however, and when they do they are very informal about their bookkeeping. However, Communists, being zealous, do not steal primarily for personal profit. They bleed the American members for political fun to serve the Communist line, pinching off some of the revenue for personal uses, but not all of it. Why should a gorilla bother with such pests when he can move into an A. F. of L. union, exhibit a gun by way of credentials and take over the treasury, confident, on the basis of the A. F. of L. record in cases past, that the international and the A. F. of L. itself will refuse to intervene lest the sacred principle of autonomy be bruised?

Closed Shop, Check-Off Are Pet Lewis Schemes

Mr. Lewis' racket is political. He is a man of vanity and great ambition, and his pet scheme is the closed shop plus the check-off. The closed shop requires that every worker in a given industry and, eventually, every worker in the United States must belong to one of his unions. The check-off is a first lien on the wages of all the members for their dues and such assessments as may be imposed by the political officers of the unions. Before they buy bread they must pay dues and assessments, and their money deducted by their employers and paid directly to Mr. Lewis' unions, may be used for political purposes contrary to their beliefs. It may be spent to elect Mr. Lewis president-dictator, and those Americans who join his unions unwillingly in order to qualify for jobs under the closed shop principle must contribute to this purpose even though they think Mr. Lewis would be a calamitous choice.

Mr. Lewis derives a portion of his power or importance from the unwilling membership of many American citizens who individually, repudiate him. But when he speaks, he speaks for them, nevertheless, and on subjects on which he is not authorized to commit them. Thus many workers—including, incidentally, many of his mine workers—who are popularly supposed to be wholly devoted to him—find themselves enmeshed into the political following of a man whom they distrust their money misappropriated to political issues which, as citizens, they strongly oppose.

The CIO is not required by any law to account for the money thus taken, or extorted from members who submit only because they must submit or go jobless. If their lo-

New Wisconsin Bluebook Cites Boost in State Aids

Madison—(7)—The 1940 edition of the Wisconsin Bluebook, a handbook on state government containing a new tenure showing the state's financial picture for the last 10 years, was released to the public Thursday.

In a special article, Charles McKeown, financial secretary to Governor Julius P. Heil, presents figures prepared by the budget bureau, disclosing that the estimated budget for 1939-41 is $72,097,000 as compared with estimated revenues of $59,986,447.08, a difference of nearly $12,000,000.

The tables listed appropriations in the last four administrations as follows:

1937-39—$71,277,453
1935-37—$60,277,845
1933-35—$48,107,169
1931-33—$38,012,963

"In reviewing these tables it is interesting to note that the cost of operating the state government today, exclusive of state aids, is no greater than it was for the biennium 1931-1933," McKeown wrote. "It follows therefore that the increase in the state budget has been due entirely to the increase in state aids to its political subdivisions and other miscellaneous state aids."

"In this connection the total aids from the executive budget to the political subdivisions of the state and other state aids for the biennium 1939-41, $41,068,342. On the other hand the cost of state government, exclusive of state aids, for the biennium 1931-1933 was $31,363,378, for the biennium 1939-1941, $31,029,750."

McKeown said the figures were presented in the Bluebook because Governor Heil felt the citizens were interested in knowing the trends in state finances.

BEATING UP THE AMERICAN ONELET

The elements in this country that are doing their utmost to goad America on to active participation in war are numerous, highly vocal and powerful. They are rallying around our chief executive because they see in him the impulsive sort of man who might lead them on to success.

But the recent broadcast of Colonel Lindbergh attracted both their shoddy criticism and their violent vituperation.

Such otherwise factual and dependable newspapers as the New York Times reflected the frenzied feeling of panic as accurately as any one in dealing with the Lindbergh argument. The Times answers that Colonel Lindbergh is a peculiar young man if he can contemplate lightly the danger of the destruction of the French and British democracies; that he is an ignorant young man if he can look with equanimity upon America's loss of the protection of the British sea power; and that he is a blind young man if he believes that we in America can live in peace and happiness irrespective of who wins the war in Europe.

The entire Times argument begs the question from start to finish and implies to Colonel Lindbergh intentions and purposes never expressed.

Those of us who are opposed to a policy at Washington that will lead us directly or indirectly into war do not relish the thought of the destruction of the French and British democracies. But we prefer such destruction to our own destruction or the constant sapping of our strength in wars created by French and British exactions. Neither can America look with serenity upon the sinking of the British sea power although the inference that it has protected us from European encroachment is incapable of proof. Britain has employed her vast power in the last 50 years, at least insofar as America is concerned, with more gentleness and restraint than any other great power ever wielded the authority it obtained. But if a cataclysm of nature tipped the British Isles into the sea and left the British navy at the bottom we haven't the slightest idea but what America would be able to make her way in the world comfortably, decently and safely. The fact that America hopes that European democracies will not be crushed is no argument to push us to the battle front nor disparage the excellent reasoning employed by Colonel Lindbergh.

When the French effort at democracy was destroyed by Napoleon America was hurt but only insofar as the ensuing wars affected its trade. When the Italian democracy was destroyed by Mussolini we continued to live "in peace and happiness irrespective of that fact." When the German democracy was destroyed by the heavy weight of Versailles we did not notice the New York Times preaching in lordly fashion of the horrors that were about to sweep over America.

We have elements in this country planning with all the cunning of a Hitler to distort the facts and abuse the picture in order to arouse America to a fighting pitch. These elements are of many different shades. Some, like the Times, have been viewing the world through bloodshot eyes. Others, too, reason no further than they look and only look cross-eyed to the end of their nose. These elements may be called the genuine ones because they are sincere even if misled. But the real danger lies with the political mountebank who dreams of becoming the cement to hold together all these elements expecting that war will turn America into a dictatorship, as it has already turned England, but that our dictators, like those of Italy and Germany, will never dismount.

The greatest danger to America today is not the Adolf Hitler who lives in Germany.

NO COALITION GOVERNMENT IN AMERICA

Mr. Landen publicly declared against Republicans going in the cabinet while Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate for third term. This view is shared by responsible Republican leaders.

Critics may say that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to avoid the awful responsibility of the torrent of backwash that is now ready to hurl itself upon this country and occasioned by his financial policies and his ineptitude in meddling in European affairs. But whether that be the underlying cause of recent actions the administration may be reminded that we still have a democracy in this country and it is not at war, nor even threatened with war except as threats may come in time in retaliation for his conduct.

Europe is still unimportant to America in comparison with the problems we have here at home, with cleaning up the mess that has been created in the last seven years and trying to get our people back to the respectable position where work was considered a laudable enterprise and sweat was not a disgrace.

The American problems cannot be settled by pretending that we are in a frenzy of fear. The Republicans do not have all the talent in the country either. If this administration at Washington would rid itself of the lotus eaters and select a personnel based upon character and talent instead of the volubility of its applause, it would at least eliminate some of the huddle it generally makes of things.

PICKET, PICKET, WHO'S GOT A PICKET?

Wage earners started this picketing business. But law-makers who run out on the people, including the wage earners, are responsible for the extent to which it has developed.

John L. Lewis, with his insurgency against the American Federation of Labor, developed the second phase of picketing whereby unions picketed each other, and between the two, tossed the management out so they would have plenty of slugging room.

But the fertile minds of men are never satisfied. And New York furnishes us with a dispatch to the effect that teamsters are picketing their own union officials. The teamsters claim the officials did not obtain for them in a strike settlement what might have been secured and assert their only remedy is to shame those who were authorized to act for them. They threaten further to re-import from France a sitdown strike at union headquarters.

But these men have polished the improvements to such a fine point that they may discover they are blackening their own eyes. For aren't they already picketing themselves when they picket their own union?

A complete answer to this case of a man kicking himself in the shins would exist if these men had the right to elect their own officers. But aren't they in a pretty pickle when the officers imposed upon them handle their affairs to their utter dissatisfaction? Our imperial rulers at Washington, who make a hundred errors a day but never yet admitted one, constitute the present obstruction to anything like peace and order in the ranks of labor at many points.

The saving grace of the nation has rested largely in the patience of the workers and their sorely tried sense of humor.

SOME INDICT THE GUIDE, TOO

In the Buckman trial at Madison an attorney for the company that committed so many wrongs testified in relation to one of its manipulations, "I didn't permit it; I couldn't stop it."

This appears to us upon its face an answer empty of strength. It reveals the possibility of counsel for a company which is fleeing the public, directing affairs as legally as possible, probably profiting handsomely in the way of fees, and yet sending for the tin basin and expecting to wash his hands of all sin and guilt by saying he had no authority to prevent it.

Of course, if a lawyer measures up to the oath he took upon admission he could in affairs of this kind, do a lot to prevent wrong. He could say: "This deal is lousy from start to finish, it stinks to the moon, I couldn't even be seen in the same room with fellows that conspire to do it."

We noted the federal court in New York not only indicted Hopson, the man who louted Associated Gas & Electric, but also indicted with him the two lawyers he always kept at his side. Let them have the opportunity of meeting in court the accusations of an angry people and let them try to blow out the window the inference from all these associations that they were in fact accessories to known crimes.

Certainly if the evidence falls short of the degree of sufficiency required to convict of crime in a civilized state it may still be sufficient to rid a respectable list of practitioners of those who have actually, by a guilty knowledge and constant participation, helped preen the feathers of the vultures.

A Verse for Today
By Anne Campbell

THE BABY'S NAME

What shall I name the baby?
(The little mother said)
I'll name him for my brother
Who is too soon dead

I'll name him for my brother,
And pray that he will be
A man who speaks as he did,
With God's authority.

He came, our welcome baby,
To die our hopeless tears,
As if he would atone for
My brother's lost years.

The world that saw him coming
Is torn with war and strife,
But many hearts are strengthened
By one good life.

What shall I name the baby?
For Christen him I should!
I'll name him for a good man,
And pray he may be good!

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington—Before the late Douglas Fairbanks died he had a remarkable conversation with Hitler's Minister of Propaganda, Herr Joseph Goebbels. Intelligence officers to whom Fairbanks told the story are now dusting it off and examining it carefully to see what significance it has in regard to Hitler's future conduct toward the United States.

Fairbanks and his wife, the former Lady Ashley, were vacationing at Venice one year ago. Goebbels also had come to Venice, and the town was so decorated in his honor that the Fairbanks home was about the only one along the Grand Canal which did not fly the swastika.

Later at the Lido, Fairbanks was introduced to Goebbels, who called him "Zorro," no doubt remembering Fairbanks' picture, "The Mark of Zorro." At a dinner, Goebbels sat beside Lady Ashley and became extremely frank about Nazi ambitions, predicting that Poland would be taken in the near future.

Lady Ashley countered that while Hitler might be able to take over some of the war-born states of Europe, his philosophy never would be accepted by the Low Countries.

To this Goebbels replied: "Oh, France and Great Britain are tired old men. They will never fight."

INVASION OF U. S. A.

The conversation then went to the United States, which Goebbels described as a country of "niggers and Jews."

"They will never fight," he said. "Our political philosophy will sweep the world. When it comes to America, we shall conquer you by methods and means of which you know nothing."

Later, Goebbels said Germany's greatest shame was the fact that she was without a great fleet, had been forced to scuttle it at Scapa Flow after the World war. Regarding this sorrowful incident Hitler had practised the philosophy of Gambetta, "Think of it always, speak of it never."

And since Hitler's greatest ambition was to secure a new fleet, he planned to let the British off lightly if they surrendered their navy to Germany.

Goebbels did not specify whom the fleet was to be used against, but as he left the Fairbanks he made this boastful farewell: "See you in the United States in eighteen months."

Fairbanks at first did not pay much attention to the remark, but later got to thinking it over. Finally he decided to report the conversation to intelligence officers.

FLEET FOR DEBTS

The Chip Robert proposal to cancel the war debts in return for a mortgage on the British fleet has received a lot of support on Capitol Hill, but not among officials familiar with Great Britain.

They point out the British are already pretty sour on the United States, and that any proposal connected with war debts (which they consider non-existent) would make them so bitter that they might purposely dispose of the fleet in a way prejudicial to the United States.

In fact, the attitude of the British toward the United States is compared to that of General Jan Surovy, the one-eyed commander of the Czech army. He became so sour at Great Britain after the surrender of Munich that he served as go-between in arranging the alliance between Hitler and Stalin.

NAVAL INSTRUMENTS

The justice department has just jumped into the discovery that U. S. submarine periscopes, naval range-finders and other important technical equipment used by the Army and Navy is being manufactured in partial cooperation with a German firm.

The American company involved is Bausch and Lomb, well-known manufacturers of optical instruments, while the German firm is Carl Zeiss of Jena.

The whole matter came out during an anti-trust prosecution by the justice department which ended this week in a consent decree by which Bausch and Lomb agreed to refrain from monopolistic practices. Perhaps more important, they also agreed to supply the navy with marine range-finders for the new cruisers. Previously they had been unwilling to guarantee delivery for several months.

The justice department began its investigation of the eye-glasses trust in an effort to bring down the price of spectacles. Bausch and Lomb was among the companies investigated, and justice department agents turned up a contract the company had signed with Carl Zeiss.

GERMAN SUPERVISION

Under this contract Bausch and Lomb exchange patent ideas with the Zeiss company, and agrees not to sell military equipment in certain countries, notably England, France, Sweden, Belgium, Poland, Canada, Finland, China and parts of South America.

But the Bausch and Lomb also permits a certain amount of supervision by Zeiss over their military department. The exact clause of the contract turned up by the Justice Department reads:

"The Bausch and Lomb Optical Company... will create a new department responsible solely to the board of directors, which is charged with the independent development of all scientific and technical tasks within the military scope, and the maintenance of associations with Carl Zeiss in Jena. The parties will come to an agreement as regards the heads to be placed in charge of this department."

In other words, the German company has the power to help choose the executives in the Bausch and Lomb department which makes lenses, periscopes, etc., for the U. S. navy.

The general terms of this were known to the navy, which actually encouraged Bausch and Lomb to cooperate with Zeiss in order to get the use of Zeiss patents. This, however, was long before Hitler started to go on the rampage.

DELAYED DELIVERY

And a short time ago, Bausch and Lomb informed the navy that they could not sign a performance guarantee in bidding on range-finders for the latest cruisers. The company said it had been so busy, with Thurman Arnold's anti-trust suit that they could not finish the range-finders on time. It was expected that they would be several months late.

To this the justice department replied that only three of the Bausch and Lomb executives had been indicted, which should not interfere with workmen in the plant.

It so happens that Bausch and Lomb is the only company at this moment available to make the range-finders, and the navy is most anxious to secure them on schedule. So last week, Thurman Arnold informed the company that if they did not agree to deliver on time, he would publish all the correspondence in which they threatened to hold up the navy.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—The Department of Commerce is on the spot.

It was put there by 46 senators, who voted for President Roosevelt's Reorganization Plan No. IV and threw the independent Civil Aeronautics Authority back into the department.

The situation was this: Two years ago, after more than three years of wrangling, investigating and lobbying, the McCarran-Lea bill knocked out the Bureau of Air Commerce (then in the Commerce department) and set up the independent CAA. Although it is not generally known, this really was one of Jimmy Roosevelt's babies when he was secretary to his father.

The CAA was made up of a five-man board, whose duties consisted principally of establishing rules, regulations and standards; an administrator in charge of the physical set-up of the bureaus of federal airways, safety regulation, private flying and certificate and inspection; and the three-man air safety board, charged independently with investigating all accidents, determining their cause and reporting to the CAA board for action.

On March 29, 1940, less than two years after this new agency started functioning, the commercial airlines established the comparatively amazing record of flying 37,300,000 miles, carrying more than 2,000,000 passengers, without a single fatal accident.

HIT HOUSE FIRST

On April 11, while the bouquets still were showering down, the President tossed his little bombshell: Reorganization Plan No. IV, which abolishes the Air Safety board entirely, and puts the CAA back into the Commerce department. Under the law, unless BOTH houses of Congress veto the plan within 60 days, it was to become effective.

The hullabaloo that this order raised almost knocked the dome off the capitol. The scrap, for weeks, shared editorial honors with the war in Europe.

The house of representatives, where such critical downpours are felt first (especially in election year) hastened to vote on the order and opposed it by the healthy vote of 232 to 153.

The senate, aware of the seriousness of the matter, took two days to debate it, even after the long hearings in committee.

It was in the heat of these arguments, coupled with the vote that upheld the order, that the Department of Commerce was put on the spot. Dire things have been predicted for aviation. It's charged that the order is a kickback to the days when the infant transportation industry was a political football with human lives the stake. Let one fatal accident occur in commercial aviation after June 11, when the new order becomes effective, and there'll be an investigation from here to Borneo.

Cueing Game

What actually was behind the order is another of those capital mysteries that may never be solved. The President said simply that it was to effect economy, more adequate supervision, and eliminate friction that now exists in CAA.

C. D. Allen, former New York newspaperman, and Tom Hardin, ace pilot, will lose their jobs when the safety board is abolished (Sumpter Smith, other member, already had resigned to become director of the national airport). Allen has his own private explanation for the order.

"My mother," says Allen, "always was very proud of me. Everytime I took a step up the ladder or achieved some little success she'd say 'I knew it, son, you are going a long way.' But never in her wildest dreams did she ever think I would reach such heights that the President of the United States would burn a house down just to get me out of it."

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

Senator Connally of Texas painted a funny picture of what might happen if national defense was left to a congressional defense committee. He says they'd all grab cigars and one fellow would vote against a big tank because more money would be tied up in one big one than in two or three little ones. And this fellow would urge buying the little tanks to spread the money around.

I take the idea up where the senator left off. I can see Senator Bopps kicking because not enough bombing planes are being built in his district by deserving voters.

"I've got a letter here from a constituent back home," Bopps would shout, "saying he can't get us to buy even a sample plane from him. He don't know nuthin' about planes, but he's always voted right and we ought to slip him some of this war business."

I can imagine Senator Shutz opposing a new fort because it's in a Republican area, like Palo Alto or Cincinnati.

And suppose Al Smith's Empire State building was trying to get some anti-aircraft guns and Mr. Roosevelt heard about it? Or any New Deal defense committee?

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—A shift in the relations between the Farmer-Labor-Progressive federation and the LaFollette leadership of the regular Progressive party is one of the more important developments of the 1940 campaign year as the Progressives launch their contest for a return to power.

The FLFP is a unique political alliance of the Milwaukee Socialist, seat of the left wing groups in other parts of the state, and the Progressives. It dates back to 1935 and to the political genius of Thomas Duncan, erstwhile right hand man for Phil LaFollette, and had as its original purpose the fusion of the Socialist and Progressive vote in Milwaukee county, particularly for the benefit of LaFollette and the rest of the Progressive state ticket in the 1936 election.

That it did all that was expected of it was shown in that election, when LaFollette got the biggest majority of his career in spite of the fact that the organization of the Progressive-Socialist union was hardly interpreted at the time as being the part of the Progressives that the 1936 canvass would turn out unfavorably for them.

UNFAVORABLE

However, despite the fact that the FLFP did yeoman's service for the Progressive cause by bringing the considerable Milwaukee Socialist vote under its banner, relations have not always been friendly. In fact, over a long period there was an active hostility, principally because of the refusal of LaFollette and other Progressive leaders to endorse the Socialist concept of "provision for use," which dominated the philosophy of the FLFP.

In the 1938 campaign the FLFP went to the length of endorsing a candidate for governor against LaFollette, and a candidate for the senate against Herman Eken, the Progressive regular's choice. Although both the FLFP nominees shortly thereafter withdrew, the gesture was significant.

Today, however, FLFP members have seen their leader, former Mayor Dan Hoan of Milwaukee, get up on a Progressive convention platform and demand that Wisconsin return Senator LaFollette to the United States senate although the senator, like his brother, has never as far as is known formally joined or endorsed the platform of the FLFP.

STRENGTH

From the Progressive point of view, such harmony is welcome, for the party will need every ounce of its strength, and perhaps more, to make a comeback this year, if indeed a return to power in the state this year is possible at all.

Just how important the FLFP will be this year, how much help it will accord the regular Progressives, observers are not sure. It is apparent that the organization has lost members and influence in the last few years, and the defeat of its key figure, Mayor Hoan, last spring didn't add to its prestige.

Significantly, FLFP leaders decline to release membership figures, although denying reports that dues-paying members have shrunk appreciably since 1938. They maintain that delegates from at least half the counties in Wisconsin will turn up at the state convention in Appleton June 22, but a better guess is that the membership is confined to the southeastern Wisconsin and upper lake shore counties.

COLLEGE PROBLEM

One factor which was not mentioned the other day in the news that the teachers' colleges are considering the adoption of rules restricting enrollment to those students who showed well in their high school classes is the conviction,

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

FIT FOOD

The corrective protective, rejuvenation or basic health diet given by O' Doc Brady generally evokes moans and groans from those who, like myself, are inordinately fond of buckwheat pancakes and maple syrup—and when I say pancakes of course I mean yeast-raised, and none of your sour milk and soda concoctions—, fried corn mush, hot fresh bread rolls, crisp buttered toast, waffles etc. But remember it is only a fundamental or model health diet on which to build or pattern your own diet. Its essential purpose is to augment the daily intake of vitamins and minerals which are deficient in the everyday refined diet, and you know by now, I hope, that the carbohydrate delicacies mentioned above, as well as most others in the carbohydrate class, such as sugars, syrups, ice cream cake, candy, honey, pastry, cookies, puddings, are either devoid of vitamins and minerals or poor in these elements altho all too rich in calories.

A diet calculated to keep you fit, especially to promote normal gastric, intestinal function, must provide several times the minimum amounts of the vitamins, according to McCollum, Bor-ock and many other authorities, required to prevent severe deficiency diseases such as beriberi and pellagra. I, O' Doc Brady, would amend that diet to read vitamins and minerals, instead of just vitamins. However, it seems that most of the foods which are naturally rich in vitamins are at the same time naturally rich in minerals.

Such a diet includes not less than a pint of milk daily, a half-pint glass of orange juice or tomato juice or preferably the citrus fruit or tomato itself, an egg, one liberal helping of two or more fresh vegetables such as lettuce, spinach, carrots, string beans, cabbage, asparagus, broccoli, the carrots and cabbage, preferably raw, the water in which vegetables are cooked added to the food (for it contains a considerable portion of the mineral elements and the vitamins. If more food is desired, take it in the form of milk, vegetable or fresh meat.

In addition the servings mentioned or recommended authorities of about 31 ounces of a cereal fortified with B-complex. One such cereal, for instance, provides over a hundred international units of B in each ounce, plus sunshine vitamin D sufficient for a growing child or youth. If one does not care for cereal, it is advisable, in my opinion, to supplement the diet with a few tablets of vitamin B complex and vitamin D daily.

If something in the bread line is still demanded, try items made from plain wheat, as described in monograph "Wheat to Eat" I send on request if you provide a 14-cent stamped envelope bearing your correct address. Please do not say "Loan" or "City." Never be ashamed to name the home town, even if it is Squelunk. Or try using one-third or one-half wheat germ in place of flour in recipes calling for flour.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Chronic Bronchitis

I have had chronic bronchitis for fifteen years. For the last four or five months have been taking two capsules of natural vitamin A (50,000 units daily) and also from time to time of "fool proof cough remedy" you describe in your booklet "Call it Cough." I am happy to report that my bronchial trouble is better than it was.

Based upon studies in recent years, that the state university has consistently drained off the cream of those classes. Although the necessity of complying with a reduced budget focused attention on the problem now, the desire to improve the quality of the college enrollees would have brought it to attention soon anyway.

has been in years, and our doctor tells me to keep right on taking the medicine. (C. A.)

Ans.—Thank you, sir. I don't know, but I begin to believe that moderate prolonged vitamin A deficiency may be a factor of chronic bronchitic chronic rheumatis and all that trouble.

Dr. McCarthy Please Take Notice

In one of your articles you used the word "milkshake"—which I fail to find in the dictionary, and being a Brady fan I don't want to miss anything in your line—so please translate into understandable English. (Mrs. G. M. B.)

Ans.—Will Dr. McCarthy please attend to this—I got it from him. I assumed it meant "bologna" sliced over so thin. Take it away, Burt.

The Complex Grouse

It is easy to find vitamin B1 and vitamin B2 or C but we can't find vitamin B complex. Please explain what this is. (Mr. J. M. G.)

Ans.—The vitamin B complex includes all of the entities that naturally grow with B1, B2, or C in meiotic acid, riboflavin, etc., in foods such as wheat, vegetables, fruit. Wheat germ is rich in B complex. Tablets and capsules of B complex are available everywhere.

Omphalitis

For several months I have been troubled with irritation and soreness and malodorous secretion from navel. (L. S.)

Answer—Twice daily bathe the irritated area gently with soapy water, rinse thoroughly, dry, powder freely with zinc stearate powder. If redness and irritation persists, twice a week, when navel is clean and quite dry, scrub once with wisp of cotton on toothpick dipped in mild tincture of iodine.

JUST suppose that down the street a dealer had an automobile so close to your heart's desire that it might have been made to your own specifications.

Suppose it had the room you've been wanting—the big, strapping size you'd like—the imposing style and good looks and soul-satisfying luxury of appointment.

Suppose it had all the life and zip and action you could ask for and a big, durable, thrifty power plant that could match even fine watch-works for smoothness.

Suppose you knew that car set the standard for real modernity and value—but just assumed that it must be out of your reach because it was so obviously good!

Wouldn't it be tragic if you passed up that honey—just because you didn't inquire what the prices actually were?

Here and there that's happening, we fear. Happening because people who want Buicks aren't getting the actual facts.

Maybe you didn't know that there are five 1940 Buicks at five different price ranges.

That every one of these has a big, husky, straight-eight engine electrically balanced after assembly by Buick's own exclusive process.

That soft, stout coil springs are found on every one—that every one has recoil-mounted Knee-Action, finger-flick transmission, bona fide Buick styling—features literally counted by the dozen.

Maybe you didn't know, above all, that for Buick SPECIAL models, current prices begin as low as $895 *for the business coupe, delivered at Flint. That even when you add

Pair Should Have Reached Game in Hearts

BY ELY CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: I quote below a hand which I think illustrates very neatly the fact that all too often we are inclined to make bids without seriously going into the reasoning that may have been in partner's mind and which caused him to make a certain declaration.

Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH	EAST
♠ 9 5	♠ 10 6 3
♥ A K 7 5	♥ 8 4
♦ A K J 7 5	♦ 9 4
♣ K 9	♣ 10 6 4

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 4	♠ 9 4
♥ 10 6	♥ 9 4
♦ J 8 5 3	♦ 10 6 4

SOUTH	WEST
♠ A 7 2	♠ 10 6 3
♥ J 8 5 2	♥ 8 4
♦ 8 5 2	♦ 9 4
♣ A 7 2	♣ 10 6 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

"I was South, and when I laid down the dummy I said: 'I am inclined to feel that you are going to lose one trick in each suit.' Perhaps my three heart bid was a little too conservative. Possibly I should have gone to four hearts. At any rate, my partner immediately threw the entire blame for not bidding at my door. I didn't argue, but in my own defense I think I have one argument that is not easy to answer. It seems to me that if my partner had given full analysis to the situation he could have reasoned along this line: 'I don't quite understand why South now comes along and bids three hearts after having bid one no trump. Obviously, he must be interested in a game, because over my two heart bid he could have bid three diamonds, which would be a sign-off, or he could have left two hearts alone.'

"Also obviously, there would have been no sense in my raising a two heart contract unless I was pretty sure that three hearts could be made. What with that thought in mind, wasn't my partner somewhat to blame for our failure to bid game?—A. B. Missouri.

My correspondent is putting it very mildly when he asks: "Wasn't North somewhat to blame for failing to bid game?" The word "somewhat" is scarcely adequate under the circumstances. North's pass was one of the most timid exhibitions imaginable. Indeed, it was incomprehensible. It is true that he had opened the bidding with one diamond, and over one no trump had "reversed" by showing his higher ranking suit. At the same time, however, he had indicated that this heart suit was only a four carder. South, in the face of that message, had given a heart raise, which was tantamount to saying that he, South, also had four hearts. Now, considering that North had four and one-half plus honor tricks, with two very respectable suits, it is almost beyond belief that he could have "hung" one trick short of game. Even if he had not held the club king, a game bid would have been in order; with that card it was superfluous. Admittedly, it would have required only a slight stretch on South's part to have jumped from two hearts to four, but since no stretch whatsoever was asked of North, it follows that the fault must be placed entirely on his shoulders.

TOMORROW'S HAND

THE HOME GARDENER

By EDWIN H. PERKINS

Neighborhoods which house both dog lovers and garden enthusiasts are problems. Dogs' invasion of the gardeners' sanctuaries cause severing of diplomatic relations among the best of friends.

Available are many sprays, good ones too, which do much toward keeping down the insect population of the garden. When sprayed on frequently annoyed plants they have a discouraging yet harmless effect on the offending canines. Nicotine is the basis of these sprays; a discouraging effect on the dog population. They detect its odor.

The use of tobacco stems for mulching has a similar effect and many advantages in addition.

Tobacco stems are waste products from tobacco manufacturing plants. They are sold by seed houses for their fertilizer, humus and anti-insect properties. A two-inch layer spread on the ground, as a mulch, makes a fine water-sieving mulch which discourages the evaporation of soil moisture. The fumes arising gently discourage the stay of aphids and other forms of insect life. Water running through the mulch and soaking into the soil is harmful to ground insects and when the stems are turned into the soil they add humus that is also rich in fertilizing qualities. Apply bone meal with the tobacco stems when they are turned in and the fertilizer becomes an almost balanced one.

TODAY'S MENU

A lot of husbands complain that their wives get into a rut about meats. Lamb, for instance, most often means roast leg, stew or chops. Good all of them. But there are many other delightful lamb dishes to add variety to your meals. Try this delicious recipe for lamb roasts. You will like its savory, unusual flavor.

To complete the main part of the meal serve baked potatoes, the traditional green peas, glazed carrots, and currant jelly. A rich strawberry shortcake will furnish the grand finale.

THE MENU
Lamb Roasts
Baked Potatoes
Green Peas
Glazed Carrots
Currant Jelly
Rich Strawberry Shortcake

Lamb Roasts
4 lamb chops Salt and pepper
2 onions 2 tbs. butter
American Milk

Cover with milk and bake uncovered at 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Cover and bake until tender about 1 1/2 hours.

Glazed Carrot Rings
3 or 4 large 2 tbs. butter carrots 2 tbs. sugar
1 cup water 1 tsp. salt
Wash and scrape carrots, cut in 1 inch slices and remove centers.

Rich Strawberry Shortcake
1 1/2 cups flour 1/2 cup cream
1/4 tsp. sugar 1 quart
1 tsp. salt strawberries
3/4 tsp. baking powder 1 cup sugar
2 tbs. shortening Butter

Sift together flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Add shortening, work it in with pastry mixer or 2 knives and with a knife mix in cream enough to make a soft dough. Press into greased square cake pan and bake 12 to 15 minutes at 400 degrees F. Wash and hull strawberries and sprinkle with sugar. Turn shortcake out on cake cooler, cut through edges on all sides with a knife, lift off bottom half with 2 forks and put on platter. Spread generously with butter, cover with half the berries and with the upper half of the shortcake, top side down. Again spread with butter and cover with remaining berries. Serve with plain thick cream or whipped cream if desired.

My Neighbor Says—

If a teaspoon of molasses or brown sugar is added to a giddle cake batter the cakes will brown more easily.

Many originally happy marriages are heading for disaster because the husband and wife are drifting or floating. A happy home needs to be anchored not only to the soil, and to social organizations in the community, but to religious societies and especially to children. Happiness can never be found by searching for it, as Sir Galahad discovered. It is always a by-product. Perform the constructive things you know are required of mature men and women, and lo, happiness will suddenly appear before you.

CASE Q-171: Hubert R., aged 29, has been married five years. "We have been quite happy, and I am still so," his attractive little wife spoke pathetically. "But Hubert is growing restless. He thinks our life is too humdrum. Recently he told me there was no excitement in marriage. He is getting bored with the monotony. "Dr. Crane, I don't feel that way at all, but I am panicky now for I feel I am losing him. "It isn't because of any other woman in the case, at least at present, but that may be the final outcome to leave the world better than they found it.

There is potential nobility in every human being, and we grow irritable and disgusted when we think we have accomplished nothing constructive through the years.

Produce And Reproduce
Men like to produce as well as reproduce. Hubert has neither accomplishment to his credit. His wife is correct in foreseeing a possible marital crash in the future if something isn't done to change his outlook and morale.

Some husbands obtain an outlet for this craving to produce something worth while, by spending their spare time on the lawn and in the garden. They plant shrubs and flowers, fruit trees and vines. Others raise chickens or rabbits, guinea pigs or pigeons. In any case, it is wise to start building a happy home by getting a little plot of ground which is your very own. This is not always easy, especially in the large cities, but it should be attempted.

Others have more of the "floating" or "transient" attitude not only toward their community but toward many of the permanent values in life. They are more careless regarding property and more casual or indifferent about civic projects, for they feel they may move when the lease expires in the spring or fall.

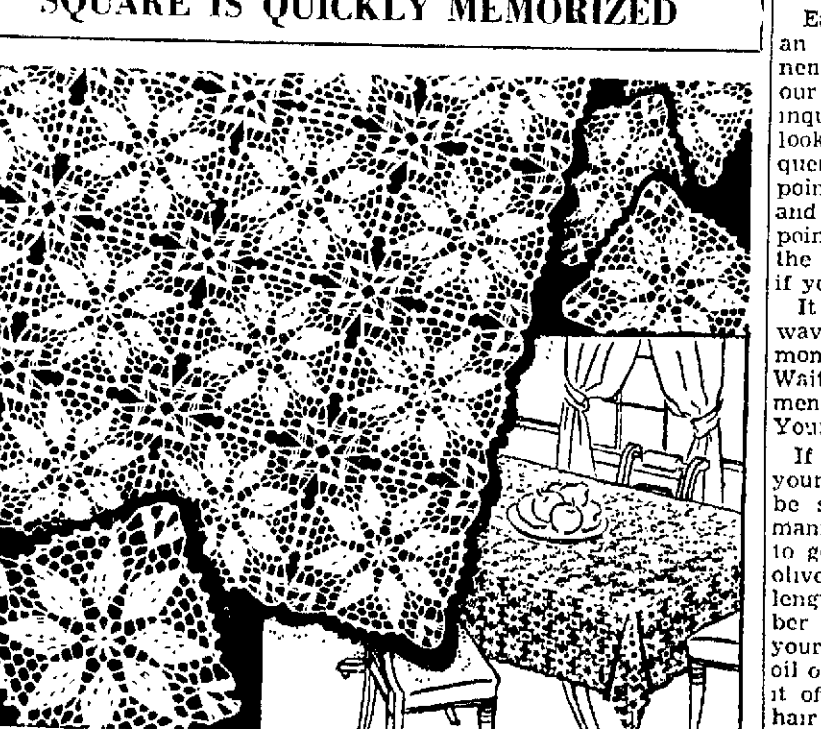

Stabilize Your Marriage
Not only should a husband and wife have stability as regards the physical location of their home, but they need social stability.

Some introverted husbands or wives will not acknowledge any pleasure in clubs or civic organizations, churches or Parent-Teacher Associations, but they need these social influences even more than their extroverted neighbors.

Link up with some church and take an active part in its constructive work. The church is a great lever by which your little efforts and financial contributions can do effective work 10,000 miles away. It is excellent for buoying up your morale.

Then rear a family of at least two children. If you cannot have your own youngsters, try to adopt a couple. And don't concentrate exclusively on cute babies. Consider the eagerness of many freckle-faced boys and girls to have a father and mother all their own. Make others happy and you take new zest in living.

Spring Is Good Time to Inspect Teeth, Tonsils

BY ANGELO PATRI

It is time to attend to the spring jobs. This is the time to examine the children and to see if they have any condition that needs attention from the physician or dentist. The little jobs are better done in the spring. Children are like the plants, stirring in growth, and they respond well to treatment now. The cool, sweet days of spring are easier on convalescent children than the hot days of summer.

If tonsils are diseased this is the time to get them out. If the child has had sore throats the past winter the physician should look at his tonsils. If he finds them diseased, out they should come, and promptly. Diseased tonsils work mischief with growing habits and children cannot afford to be bothered with them. The process of getting rid of them is simple and safe, and there are plenty of skilled physicians and surgeons ready to serve.

Time to Vaccinate
The children's teeth should be carefully looked at just now. If there are stains, cavities, loose teeth—anything not just as it ought to be—the dentist will see it and advise about treatment. The first teeth are important to the health of the permanent set and should be cleaned, filled and treated as the dentist may indicate. Don't neglect this because sound, clean teeth have an important place in the child's scheme of health.

This is the time for vaccinations. If they are required for admission to school. One of the inexcusable mistakes that is made is the vaccination of children the first day they enter school. Vaccinations are not a treat. Even when they do not "hurt" they have their effect on the child. He doesn't feel well. A sore arm, a feeling of upsetness, are not good preparation for the first day in school.

That first day is a tremendous experience for a child. For the first time in all his life he is cut off from his mother and his home. For the first time in his life he faces a world in which he is a stranger and there is none to hold his hand, to explain, to comfort and protect. He must stand alone.

For this ordeal he must muster every ounce of power—physical and spiritual—that he has within him and direct it to his purpose. He needs to feel free of his body and free in his spirit. He cannot do that.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Good Housewife Can Earn Her Keep Many Times Over

BY DOROTHY DIX

A statistician has figured out that the wife of the average man, what with her board, clothes, doctors' bills, beauty treatments, trips, presents and one thing and another, costs him $50,000, provided they live together for thirty or forty years. These figures seem to put wives in the luxury class, along with yachts and private planes, and appear to explain why so many young men steer clear of matrimony. They feel they can't afford it with wives quoted as high as they are. But in this they are mistaken, and the best paying investment that any youth ever makes is when he gambles on Wives Preferred. Of course, if a man picks out for a wife a silly little addle-pated girl who is lazy and extravagant she is a total loss and isn't worth $50,000 or 50 cents. But if he marries a woman who is intelligent and thrifty and industrious, she not only doesn't cost him a penny, she is money in his pocket. For if any human being ever earns his or her bread and keeps it is the wife who performs such various and multifarious duties that it would bankrupt her husband if he had to pay for the services she renders.

Dorothy Dix Add up the wages of a housekeeper, a cook, a housemaid, a laundress, a nurse, a purchasing agent, a social secretary, a companion and you will perceive one of the reasons why widowers with children are in such haste to remarry. They can't afford to stay single.

Furthermore, that wife is worth all she costs is amply proven by the fact that men very rarely begin to accumulate any property until after they get married.

As long as a man is a bachelor he is the victim of all his predatory relatives, who feel that as he hasn't any family of his own to support, he might as well take care of theirs; and of his borrowing friends, who know he is always good for a touch.

But as soon as a man gets married his wife seizes up the holes in his pockets and separates him from the spongers, and before he knows it he has money in the bank.

Even an extravagant wife is often a first aid to prosperity, because her husband has to hustle so hard to pay her bills that it frequently develops unexpected abilities in him and turns him into a go-getter and a millionaire.

Another way in which a wife works her passage in the matrimonial boat is by taking care of her husband's health, which, after all, is his main asset in life.

Doctors say that the chief reason that married men live longer than single ones is not only because they lead more regular lives and, as a rule, are more wholesome fed, but because their wives watch out for the little illnesses that the men themselves neglect.

It is the wife's nagging about putting on dry shoes when they get their feet wet, and going to bed when they take cold, and seeing the doctor about that tired feeling that keeps many a man out of the grave for years and years.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Each of us hopes, when we make an appointment for a new permanent wave, that it will so improve our beauty that close friends will look at us and say, "Why have you done to look so well?" But alas, all too frequently we leave the salon disappointed, for our hair looks disheveled and not at all beautiful. This disappointment may not be the fault of the hairdresser—she can't do much if your hair isn't in good condition.

It is not wise to get a permanent wave during that period in the month when you feel below par. Wait a week, or make your appointment ten days before that time. Your hair will respond better.

If you have used any tint at all on your hair, or a color rinse, it should be stripped off your hair in this manner: Two days before you plan to get your wave, rub a lot of hot olive oil on your scalp and also the length of your hair. Put on a rubber bathing or shower cap, cover your ears with cotton and leave the oil on all night. You will thus steam it off. The next day shampoo your hair well with pure castile and rinse it thoroughly. Give it two or three soapsings if it requires that many, to remove the oil. Do not put anything else on your hair before you go to the salon the day following.

This allows sufficient time for the scalp and hair, and it will curl more softly and easily. Do not let the operator wash it the second time, unless you were not successful in getting out all of the oil.

At the end of three weeks or a month, have your hair shampooed well. After it is dry, have all the broken ends cut off and the rest of the hair expertly shaped. If you possibly can do so, wait one more day for your permanent. The night and morning before your appointment brush your hair vigorously with a clean brush. You will be surprised at the sheen your hair will have after it has been waved.

Buying Your Wave
Don't let any operator tell you that any wave is as good as another. It is not true. The art of waving hair must be mastered, and the solution for your particular type of hair (and its condition) must be carefully selected. Don't buy a bargain wave. All good permanents are priced about equally. Select an experienced operator, a reliable salon and method of waving. You will never regret it!

My leaflet "Reconditioning Tired Hair" tells any girl or woman how to bring back lost hair beauty. If you request it write me one card of this paper and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Good Taste Today

by Emily Post

"FLOWER BOY"

A little "flower boy" in a wedding would certainly have an effeminate suggestion, and I can well understand why a certain little boy, aged only 5, has violently rebelled at the suggestion that he walk up the aisle with a little girl and carry a basket of flowers to match hers. But the boy's mother says that the bride does not want a ring bearer, and she does not see why a basket is unsuitable, and that it is certainly better than having David twirling his handkerchief or twiddling his thumbs.

I agree against a flower boy! But the answer, as a matter of fact, is quite simple. Instead of having the little girl carry a basket of flowers, they could both carry a garland of green leaves and white flowers between them. If he would like a masculine name for this office, they could be called swag-bearers. Each should hold it about a foot from his hand, and, when it is allowed to hang down, and let the center sag slightly between them.

Seeing Friends Off
Dear Mrs. Post: My married sister is going off on a cruise. Kindly tell me whether I have to wait for her to say something to me about my coming down to the ship to see her off, or whether I may go down as I had expected to. Some one tells me that one is not supposed to go to a boat to see any one off unless invited.

Answer: Of course, go to the boat to see her off—unless she has told you not to. It is true that one would hesitate to go uninvited to see some one off whom one does not know very well. But this hardly applies to a sister.

Keeping Hats On
Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell me if women guests are always supposed to keep their hats on at a tea no matter if this is a big formal party or just a little intimate gathering. I believe the hostess is supposed to go hatless at a tea party but what about the tea she gives at a hotel or club?

Answer: A hostess does not wear a hat at home, but a very smart woman usually does when she gives a tea outside of her own house. Guests always wear hats except when staying in the hostess's house. If you were taking tea very informally in the house of an intimate friend, you might take off your hat if you are the sort of person who goes bareheaded on every possible occasion. On the other hand, if you care about a very suave appearance or if you are very formal—either one—you are not likely to just pull off your hat anywhere, ever.

Fancy Work a Suitable Wedding Present?
Dear Mrs. Post: Would a crocheted doily set make a suitable wedding present, or is something like this better to give as an engagement or shower present?

Answer: If you mean something finer than hot plate mats—something for example, that could be classified as Irish lace—then the answer is yes.

Be sure that your stationery and phraseology, whenever you write a letter. Send for Emily Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," enclosing ten cents. Address Emily Post, care Appleton Post-Crescent, P. O. Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y.

Wives who have fished drunkards out of gutters
We know wives who have forgiven philanderers and taken them back home when they were too old and broken in health to roam any more; who have worked to support lazy loafers; wives who have spent years nursing querulous invalids.

We know that their worth can never be estimated in man-made currency. Fifty thousand or fifty millions, it would still be too little. Only God can give them their just recompense.

Why Not Give the Bridegroom a Shower?
Dear Dorothy Dix—We are a group of men friends, and one of our group is about to be married. We would like to give him a shower, to be carried out in the same way as the showers that are given to prospective brides.

Inasmuch as the groom has so much to pay for anyway, we think that a supply of shirts, ties, socks and pajamas would save him quite a sum of money and come in handy. We would appreciate your viewpoint in this matter.

HIS FRIENDS.

Answer: Go to it. I think it is a fine and dandy idea, and I am sure your friend will be deeply appreciative of your thought of him. It has been said that the most unimportant person at a wedding is the groom. I have never seen why this should be the case, inasmuch as but for him there would be no wedding; nor why the bride should walk away with all the attention and presents.

I once attended a shower that was given for a prospective bridegroom, and it was very gay and festive.

LITTLE SPITFIRE

By Jean Randall

YESTERDAY: Isabel tells Brenda about her love for Mac. Brenda is sympathetic but insists she doesn't like Mac herself. To the dismay of The Street and especially of Miss Ormond, the ex-teacher, Brenda becomes friendly with the cartoonist, Hugh Salts.

Chapter Seven
SENSE OF PROPERTIES
ADELAIDE continued to be upset at Brenda's defiance of Miss Ormond. She went about for the rest of the day with a look of worry on her face and as soon as dinner was over she beckoned Mac from the dining room into the little office where she made out her bills and transacted such business as her impractical soul was capable of.

Brenda, loitering on the porch in the cool air of the evening, suddenly was aware that her first acquaintance of The Street loomed beside her.

She patted the step invitingly, her early antagonism forgotten. One of the girl's most likable traits was the ability to let bygones be bygones.

"Sit here and cool off," she said. "I'm trying to get the topography of The Street straight in my mind. Three houses in this street, seven on the other. Mrs. Arnold at the end across the street, Hugh Salts's the very last house. Isn't that right?"

"Perfectly right!" He sat down beside her, sighing heavily. "Brenda—"

"Good heavens!" she exclaimed, startled. "You nearly blew me away with that mournful breath. It must be contagious," she continued idly. "Mrs. Rostetter—Adelaide—was sighing away exactly like that this morning!"

"And for the same reason, too, I imagine!" The reply came crisply. "Look here, Brenda! You're young, you're a stranger to The Street—to the town, so far as that goes—you don't know Hugh Salts!"

"She jerked upright, all her prettiness gone as if by magic. "What's his poor Hugh again, is it?" she remembered now. "Adelaide wanted to speak to you after dinner. About me, was it? My highly improper conduct in calling at the studio yesterday afternoon?" Her low voice began to thrill with notes the unhappy young man remembered. Her blue eyes began to shine with stars which, lovely as they were, he could have dispensed with. "Granted," she said, "that a visit, even properly chaperoned by a housekeeper, is improper, would you mind informing me who appointed you the guardian of my conduct?"

"Adelaide asked me to speak to you—"

"And why you? Why not Eric? Or Hugh himself? Or Judge Harper? Why, of all the masculine residents in The Street, must Dion MacKelvey be requested to remonstrate with me? I'd love to!" she murmured low and sweetly, "to know! Truly I would!"

Mac, fidgeted on the step. If only he had heeded that inner warning and refused to do Adelaide's bidding in this matter! But he was a person of determination. Having put his hand to the plow, he would not turn back. He said seriously:

"Perhaps because I'm the only one who is interested enough in you to want to keep you from making a mistake! You see, Hugh is a little different from most people— from the rest of us. His wife—"

"Only one hundred pounds of curls, dimples, blue eyes and ruffled organdy exploded. "Oh, pooh! And tosh! And died-de-dee! What is there so important in my slopping into anybody's studio for a chat? Even if Hugh Salts has forty wives and they've all left him, it would be perfectly moral and upright—for me to call on him I mean! Aunt Anne told me The Street was very conventional. She didn't tell me it was prim and prissy—and silly!" she ended emphatically.

"And even if my wife else has to be like that, YOU don't! The afterthought came in a tone so low he had to bend his head to catch it.

"I Want You to Be Happy!" "I agree with you it's silly," Mac admitted. "Salts is a fine chap and there's no reason on earth why he shouldn't spend the afternoon in his studio if you like; no reason except that Miss Ormond and a few others around here would be shocked and make it uncomfortable for you." He smiled down at her placatingly. "I want you to be happy, Brenda! I want you to like The Street— everybody on it. One has to make concessions to almost every neighborhood almost every place one stays. You said they wouldn't take your writing seriously in New York. Well, that's the objection there. Here, it's an old-fashioned and perhaps too slavish adherence to the conventions. All I ask is—"

But she continued to shake her head.

"It's true someone came along and taught them sense. They need a sense of proportion instead of a sense of the proportion."

"You mean"—he spoke gravely—"that you intend to go to the studio just the same?"

"Just the same, or perhaps a little often."

"He rose. "You're a very foolish child then. Good night!"

It was almost dark when Eric Mason, on his way to keep an engagement for the evening, nearly stumbled over the little figure on the steps.

"Brenda! My word! What're you moaning out here for?" She replied with dignity: "I'm not moaning! I'm revolving a very important ethical question in my mind."

He crumpled dropped companionably down beside her and lighted a cigarette.

"The question being: shall you or shall you not yield to the prevailing sentiment against your going to see Salts? Don't yield," he advised briefly. "Stand your ground."

"Does everybody in the house know the situation?" She sounded startled.

"In the house? You mean on The Street? My dear girl, I'd be willing to lay out a pretty penny that the sole topic of conversation in ten houses at the identical moment is Miss Brenda Burnham and her dropping in on Hugh yesterday afternoon. You can't sneeze in this neighborhood," he continued pathetically, "without sixteen people calling up and recommending their favorite nose drops, or cold remedy."

"But why? Why are they so interested in other people's affairs?" "Because they have none of their own!"

Allied Artillery And Infantry Used To Check Germans

ed French positions and brought replies from French batteries.
In the wooded Argonne region several infiltrations of German soldiers managed to pass through the French lines, he added, but these men are being rounded up.

Artillery duels at the extreme eastern end of the active front extending across northern France, in the vicinity of Longuyon, near the junction of the French, Belgian and Luxembourg frontiers, were described as having calmed down
"without direct results."

German attacks south of Sedan yesterday were repulsed, the high command said, "in spite of the means used" by the Germans. This was not explained further.

Although the bitterest fighting appeared to be along the strategic Scheldt river, the opposing war machines were locked in battle from the region of the English channel eastward to the Luxembourg frontier, a distance of 300 miles as the war bird flies but much farther over the twisted routes of war.

The French launched violent counter-attacks with the apparent immediate objective of joining their main body of troops with the allied forces encircled in Belgium. Ultimately, the mastery of the English channel was at stake.

Battle Forms Pincer
The Scheldt river fighting was believed to involve large masses of regular French infantry.

The larger battle lines formed a pincer, with the lower jaw stretching from Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme river just 12 miles from the channel, which the British announced they captured the night before yesterday, eastward along the Somme to Peronne, then southeastward across the Oise river to the Aisne and eastward along the Maginot line 20 miles southwest of Longwy near the junction of the French Belgian and Luxembourg frontiers.

The northern jaw lay to the east from Abbeville north to the Somme to the Cambrai sector, upper end of the gap, and then north along the Scheldt to Valenciennes, at the Belgian border, and up into Belgium to Power Lines Require Town Board Permission

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—A town board permit is needed before the state highway commission can authorize a transmission line for the extension of service in rural areas, according to Attorney General John E. Martin who today advised William E.
O'Brien of the commission.

O'Brien queried the attorney general on an application by the Wisconsin Michigan Power company to extend its lines and to build a transmission line in the town of Menasha.

warning north along the channel coast from Abbeville, France, which was reached last Tuesday.

Entonic, according to German diplomatic sources at Bern, Switzerland, the Germans captured the French town of Montreuil, near the channel, and occupied the channel port of Le Touquet, about 12 miles south of Boulogne. Le Touquet is a famous British resort.

The British authority, who announced Boulogne's fall, said other points reached by German mechanized detachments were not being disclosed because such disclosures might be the first news of the activity to reach the German command itself.

Presumably the German conquer-Ghent. The line continues still further northward, but fighting appeared to extend only to this point.
It was still a war of maneuver with the opposing elements trying to cut each other off, but the extent of the area over which increasingly large units were locked made yesterday one of the most violent days of the war.

RELIEVE RESIDENTS
Three Rivers, Mich.—(AP)—The City Club of Three Rivers wants the local fire whistle to sound twice—once when the fire starts and then later on when it's out. Too many citizens, they claim, do a lot of needless worrying after the initial alarm.

"They always used to toot the whistle at least once—and sometimes they'd give it a couple of toots —to show the blaze was extinguisht, and there was no further need for worry," explained L. S. Dooley, a merchant.

"Now you go along for hours after the alarm is sounded, figuring that the town may be burning down."

College May Queen Ceremony Sunday Will Recall Memories Of Elaborate Programs of Past

THE annual Lawrence college May Queen ceremony Sunday afternoon on the lawn in front of Alexander gymnasium on the South campus may bring back to some of the city's older residents and alumni memories of the elaborate event the college May festival used to be.

Although it is still a colorful ceremony, the crowning of the May Queen is now a much more simple affair than it was 25 years ago, when school children from all parts of the city participated in the procession, and when the program included gala folk dances and stately minuets.

Miss Dorothy Gregory, the late Mrs. T. W. O'Neil of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, was the queen in May, 1915, 25 years ago this month. Dressed in white, she rode to her throne in a white carriage decorated with yellow flowers and drawn by a brown pony.

The procession left Ormsby hall at 2.30 in the afternoon and wound through the campus to the throne, which had been placed in front of the library. As Miss Gregory ascended the throne, the students sang the old English May song, "Here Comes the Queen."

A May pole dance, in which men participated for the first time that year, followed the crowning.

Next on the program was the Dance of the Flowers, presented by 18 girls in gowns of orange, white and green, and carrying garlands of yellow flowers. A lively Italian Tarantella and a Swedish rance added to the color of the festival.

Hair in Braids

Wearing their hair in long braids a feat the Lawrence co-ed of 1940 would have some difficulty accomplishing, another group of girls presented a rustic American dance in the May Queen ceremony a quarter of a century ago.

The costumes included pink gowns and pink aprons. In the Dance of the Milkmaids a German folk dance, the girls carried shirring milk pails.

The dance program was brought to a triumphant close "the Appleton Daily Post reported, "in the Highland Fling danced with elegance and suppleness by 12 college men." In the group were Nathan Bergstrom, John Baldwin, Robert Hilmour, Jules Houghtaling, Harold Holtz, Harold Hanson, Paul Riner,

TO CROWN QUEEN

Because Miss Mona Quill, last year's May Queen, is attending school in Washington, D. C., and will be unable to crown her successor in the annual Lawrence college ceremony at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon outside Alexander gymnasium, Miss Betty Ann Johnson, above, last year's maid of honor, will place the crown on the queen's head. Miss Johnson is teaching at Menasha.

Forrest Kirkpatrick, Robert Smith, Milton Siter, Harold Shattuck and William Thomas

This year's ceremony, scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, will include no dances danced with elegance by college men but there will be songs by the Lawrence A Cappella choir and the presentation of the queen, her maid of honor and her ladies-in-waiting their identities to remain a secret until the ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony the Lawrence Women's association will entertain at open house at Russell Sage hall in honor of the queen and her court.

If the weather is bad the crowning will take place at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

College Town Girls Elect New Officers

MISS CATHERINE ROEMER was elected president of the Town Girl's association of Lawrence college at a picnic meeting Thursday evening at Telulah park. The other girls elected to offices were Miss Patricia Heenan named secretary; Miss Janet Fallinwidder, treasurer; Miss Mary Lou Van Wyk, social chairman; and Miss Betty Stulp, Lawrence Women's association representative. The picnic closed the organization's activities for this school year.

The concluding meeting of the "T" bridge club for the season took place last night at the home of Mrs. Bernard Swamer, 1119 W. Oklahoma street. Prizes were won by Miss.

Sunny View Pupils to Hold Outing at Park

Three pupils at Sunny View school, town of Glenville, were neither absent nor tardy all year, their teacher, Mrs. Evelyn Witt, announced today. They are Richard Peters, Billy Peters and Bernice Schultz. The school closed for the summer Wednesday, and the pupils will have their picnic Sunday at Alicia park.

Helen McIver, Mrs. Roger Emrich and Mrs. Walter Meyer.

Mabel Simon, 527 N. Fair street, entertained Eight Belles club last night at her home. Those present were Jane Simon, Patricia McGilligan, Joyce Nutting, Betty Rundal and Betty Strobl. Next Thursday Betty Rundal, 540 N. Locust street, will be hostess.

No Negligence Is Found by Jury in 2 Traffic Deaths

Verdict States Pair Died As Result of Automobile Accident

An inquest jury at Dale yesterday found no negligence in the traffic deaths of two Dale youths, and Raymond P. Dohr, district attorney, said that there would be no further investigation in the fatal accident.

The inquest jury read "that Ray Krummenacher came to his death March 28 as a result of an auto accident on County Trunk T by hitting a tree in an automobile. That James Lautenschlager came to his death on March 29 as a result of an auto accident on March 28 on Highway T in which he was the driver of the car."

The boys, with two companions, were in a car that skidded on an icy hill and struck a tree. The two survivors of the crash, Patrick Bradley, 16, and Robert Bohren, Jr., both of Dale, were injured, Bradley suffering a broken arm and Bohren a broken leg. Both testified at the inquest. Bradley said he was riding in the front seat with Lautenschlager while Bohren and Krummenacher were in the rear seat. He said they were on their way to New London to attend an athletic meet.

Harvey Graupman, near whose farm the accident occurred, testified he heard the crash and assisted the injured. Dr. J. Brillman, Dale testified as to the injuries of the victims.

Curtain Call Presents Play Penned by Appleton Senior

Vividly portraying a cross section of life in an emergency aeronautics station, Curtain Call, dramatic society of Appleton High school, presented John Hammer's original play, "Wings Rest in Heaven," for the assembly Thursday afternoon. Hammer is a senior at the high school.

Especially fine was the penetrating insight into the personalities and the conflict of personalities under the player stood out as a distinct individual as the tangled threads of emotion were unknotted. William Mullen was the dominating Christy, relentless and almost heartless in his fierce love for the sky. The realization of human values came to him in the sacrifice of his life for the girl he loved. That girl, Kelly, was ably played by Mary Bob Knapp. Kelly emerged as a sensitive personality under the love of Preston, a pilot who comes to the station and teaches her the meaning of nobility. Donald Smith was convincing in the role.

James Miller was Doc, who drinks because he hates to face the bitter reality of every day living. Tex, the mechanic, injected a breezy note in the somber play. Charles Klieh had the part. Ralph Junge was Pop, Kelly's father and manager of the lunch stand where all the action takes place. A tragic figure was Whitey, who lost his mind in a crack-up and wanted only to fly "beyond the moon." John Leonard took the role. Jay Main was Marty, Preston's attendant.

Hammer directed and staged his own play. He was assisted by Miss Ruth McKenna, head of the speech department in the directing. The play was built under the direction of Miss Kathryn Fralish, speech instructor, and Jack Burroughs, art instructor, managed the lighting.

Funeral services will be conducted at 9 o'clock Monday morning at St. Mary church by the Rev. W. H. Grace, the cortege forming at the residence at 8:30. Burial will be in St. Joseph cemetery chapel. The rosary will be recited at the residence at 8 o'clock Saturday evening and at 7:30 and 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

peris was being assembled, he said, to decide which type ships and engines are the most essential for defense needs.

Mr. Roosevelt said today that the governors of the 48 states would meet in Duluth, Minn., about June 2 and that he understood their intention was to support and pledge cooperation and the defense plan.

Other entrants and their scores are: Calvin Kippenhan, 161 points; Carleton Brecklin, 150 points; Edgar Thomas, 127 points; Dale Berner, 96 points; Jerome Luebben, 92 points; and Leo Patterson, 79 points.

Mr. Roosevelt discussed the meeting yesterday with Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri.

Asked whether Stark had indicated what line of cooperation the governors might follow, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative.

The chief executive discussed the governors' meeting at a press conference.

At the capitol the senate naval affairs committee rejected a suggestion by Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.) that certain testimony by Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of naval aeronautics, be suppressed. The testimony was said to indicate that the navy had on hand at present only about 500 airplanes capable of equal combat against modern European war planes.

The committee acted after Walsh commented that Towers' testimony disclosed a "very bad picture" of national defense.

Senator Byrd (D-Va.) reported that it was his estimate from figures given by Towers that only about 500 of the navy's 1,367 combat planes were capable of meeting modern European planes equally.

At his press conference Mr. Roosevelt asserted that a proposed new housing program was tied in with defense.

He said he told three members of the house banking committee, before which a housing bill is pending, that he hoped for an authorization of funds for the program to cover not only urban slum clearance, but also small-town housing.

If a new industrial plant were established in a town of four or five thousand people, Mr. Roosevelt said, and the factory employed four or five thousand more, the housing situation would become acute.

Would Avoid Politics
Senator Lucas (D-Ill.) said he hoped no political use would be made of the information from Towers. If President Roosevelt had asked Congress six months ago for the emergency defense program which he requested 10 days ago, Lucas said he would have been "accused of war-mongering."

A senate-house conference committee returned to the house for a direct vote a provision in the army's civil functions appropriation bill for $15,000,000 in cash and $99,000,000 in contract authority to start work on a third set of Panama canal locks.

An indirect result of the war situation was a recommendation by a senate banking subcommittee that congress grant the Commodity Credit Corporation a $500,000,000 increase in its loan funds to cushion possible price declines due to the war.

House leaders agreed to send back to the senate next week a bill to prohibit treasury purchases of foreign silver. The leaders said the senate exceeded constitutional rights in acting on the measure, since all revenue legislation must originate in the house and there was a silver transfer tax involved.

Senator Bridges (R-H.) proposed that congress forbid aliens to carry on, buy or sell any implement of war, and Senator Reynolds (D-N.C.) asked for a $50,000,000 investigation of "fifth column" threats to the national defense.

John Murphy Scores 227 Points to Win School Archery Meet
John Murphy scored 227 points to win the archery contest at Appleton High school Thursday afternoon. He scored 102 points at 20 yards, 79 at 30 yards and 46 at 40 yards.

Says Propaganda Strongest Weapon Of Nazi Germany

All Living Under Its Sway Affected by It, Ripon Prof. States

Milwaukee — (P) — Dr. Ludwig Freund, former German army officer who lived in Germany early in the Hitler regime, told the General Federation of Women's clubs council today that propaganda is the most efficient weapon of the Nazi technique.

Dr. Freund, professor of sociology at Ripon college, said that "no body who, for a lengthy period, is subject to a given type of doctrine and ideologies under hermetic exclusion of all other ideas and of contact with the outside world, can entirely escape their impact."

A man coming from Germany is bound to be puzzled if not stunned by the differences in the way of life and the concept of citizenship as regards Germany and the United States," he continued. "For one and a half years I lived under the Hitler regime. This comparatively short time had transformed my mind so completely, and without having grown aware of the change, that I, a convinced anti-Nazi, unconsciously applied Nazi standards in the first few months of my residence here."

Dr. Freund, who has taken out American citizenship papers, praised democracy as an ideal but expressed some doubt whether people in democracies in time of national emergency accept all their responsibilities.

Citizens must recognize that there are times when voluntary sacrifices are imperative," he added. "The alternative is the physical enforcement of sacrifice, which would be equivalent to the end of democracy."

J. William Hughes, native of Wales now living in Milwaukee, asserted that lack of courage in tackling domestic problems brought failure of democracies in other parts of the world.

"No invading country ever marched into a country before first establishing its fifth column within it," he said.

50,000 Men to be Trained as Pilots and well known citizens who have sensed its value and are eager to promote it.

The administration is very glad to have their support, he declared.

What the cost may be of giving three months flying instructions to 50,000 persons next year is not definitely known at this time, Mr. Roosevelt said, and he indicated that nothing would be known on that point until he submitted recommendations to congress.

The plans announced today mean, the president said, that the pilot training part of the emergency defense program is essentially complete.

Mr. Roosevelt said that when the plans were completely in operation there would be about 550 primary training centers throughout the country.

Grode was hampered by an injured side during part of the season. The only other senior is Werner Fahl who scored four points in the broad jump.

Second high scorer on the squad was Donald Popp, another sophomore, who counted 30 points. He and O'Brien placed third in their respective events and earned the right to compete in the state meet. Popp placed first in the 440 twice and earned 21 points in that event. He added eight points in the low hurdles and a single point in the 220. In addition he was a member of the relay team.

Hugh Moien, a junior, counted 26 points. He placed in the mile in each race and was first twice to total 19 points. He also added 7 points in the high jump. Waldo Friedland, another junior, scored 19 and 5-6 points, chiefly in the 440 hurdles in which he placed in every meet to score 14 points. He added 4 and 5-6 points in the high jump and scored a singleton in the low hurdles.

Edward Stolla counted 13 points and scored in the 100 in each meet. He also added points in the 220 and in the relay. William Robinson scored nine points in the shot and discus. James Wiegand was the lone Menasha entry in the pole vault and scored 8 points. He showed steady improvement during the season and hit his best form by tying for second in the conference meet.

Today and Tomorrow

America First

The Republican leaders could not talk as they have talked the past few days if they realized the extreme and immediate peril in which America has been placed. Apparently they are still under the impression that the question is whether we shall let our sympathy for the Allies lead us into the European war; apparently they still think that question is whether Mr. Roosevelt is to get some kind of political advantage at home out of the catastrophe overseas. They are tragically mistaken. There are no longer the questions before the people.

There has been plenty of hysterical chatter in Washington and no doubt there are Democratic politicians as there are Republican who are thinking of their own political profit. But the question of responsibility and informed men in Washington—in the Navy, the Army, the State Department—is not sentimentality or hysteria. It arises from the knowledge that in the next few days choices may have to be made, decisions may have to be taken, issues may be forced upon us which involve directly and fundamentally our capacity to defend the elementary and vital interests of the United States.

British Fleet Is In Danger Of Entrapment

The fact of the matter is that with the Allied army trapped in Flanders and northern France, the British fleet is in immediate peril of being trapped as well. The British fleet is based on the British Isles, and if England cannot be defended against the attack which will be launched against it, the British fleet will be captured by Hitler who will capture the ships which are not sunk in attempting to repel the attack. He will then be master not only of Europe but of the Atlantic Ocean. For we have no navy in the Atlantic Ocean.

That is by no means all. There is an understanding between Italy and Japan. The officially sponsored propaganda of the Japanese government in Italy this week confirms what competent observers have long foreseen—namely, that if the citadel of British sea power in the British Isles was enveloped by Hitler, the Italians and the Japanese would move against the two other citadels, one in the Mediterranean and the other in the Far East. This movement may already have begun. The question before the United States at this moment is what it can do to prevent the surrender of the Allied fleets; for if they are surrendered, terms of peace will be imposed upon the United States as well as upon the Allies.

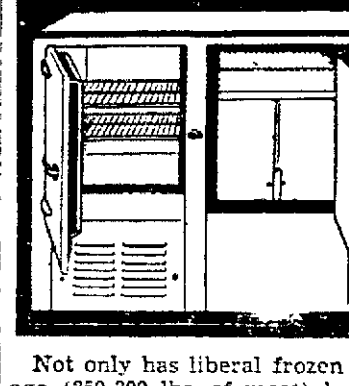

Our own situation is too grave for rumormongering against those who refused to see the dangers of the situation. But only at extreme peril to the nation's safety can they continue to stand aloof, refusing to take the trouble of informing themselves fully and of sharing as patriots the momentous responsibility of the decisions that will be forced upon this nation in the next few days. It was high time that Senator Taft completed his political junket and returned to his post of duty in the national capital. Mr. Willkie should abandon his speechmaking tour; he should not impair his high availability in these critical times by partisan agitation. Mr. Hoover and Governor Landon should come here and stay here, allowing no memories of 1932 and 1936 to divert them from their immediate duty to take a responsible part in the consultations which are now imperative. If they distrust the President's judgment, that is all the more reason why they should now take a patriotic part in steadying the President's judgment.

Joint Action By Both Parties Needed

To do that they must do more than read the newspapers and listen to the radio; they must put themselves in continual touch with all the sources of information in the government and in the United States. For they must realize from their own experience that there are times when the government cannot publish everything it knows without aggravating the very dangers it is seeking to avert. This is such a time in such a time the people have a right to be able to feel that the information which cannot be

Women Propose Equal Rights Law

Assert Statute Books Con-tain 1,000 Discrim-inatory Rules

Milwaukee—(P)—Mrs. Helen Robbins Bitterman of Ohio, urged adoption of an amendment to the United States constitution guaranteeing equal rights to women as well as men in an address late yesterday to the General Federation of Women's Clubs council.

"Except for the right to vote, women are not citizens of the United States in the full sense of the word and do not enjoy the same protection of the constitution as men do," she declared.

Asserting that there still were 1,000 laws discriminatory against women on the statute books, Mrs. Bitterman said that trying to remove these laws one by one is like trying to bail out a boat with a sieve.

Passage of an equal rights amend-ment was opposed by Mrs. Laura Hughes Lundy of Chicago, who con-tended that there was no assur-ance that this amendment will wipe out any of the silly old laws which discriminated against women.

Speaking in favor of federal non-support legislation, Mrs. Gustav Kotter of Philadelphia said "it would eliminate the glaring evil of unscrupulous husbands and fa-thers shirking their responsibilities by going into another state."

Hurley spoke on "What It Means to be a Senior" Gift presentation ad-dresses to senior girls: Joyce Dag-gett and Marjorie Bates. Lila Zieg-elbauer and Rita Lorge poured at the tea. The girls wore formals and the room was decorated in gold and blue.

Farmers Try Out New Fertilizer

Sixty-Five Tons Being Used in Shawano, Langlade and Door Counties

Farmers in several parts of the state this year are trying out a new fertilizer product known as metaphos, according to a department of agriculture bulletin received by J. F. Magnus, Outagamie county agent.

Metaphos is a highly concentrated phosphate fertilizer containing 60 to 65 per cent of phosphoric acid, according to soils specialist C. J. Chapman of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Supplied free by the TVA to farmers cooperating in fertilizer demonstration work about 65 tons are being used in Shawano, Langlade and Door counties this year. The only expense which farmers bear is the freight charge from the TVA plant at Seaford, Tennessee to the place where the material is to be spread.

Fields on which metaphos is applied are being given complete fertilizer treatment including lime and potash when needed, Chapman explains.

Metaphos is also being used in more than 300 pasture improvement demonstrations in the state this year, Chapman reports.

DEAD END KIDS IN NEW SHOW

The "Dead End Kids on Dress Parade," a Warner Bros. picture starring the Dead End Kids, is the feature attraction at the Elite Theatre for 3 days starting today.

In this picture, the famous bunch of screen toughs do a complete turn-about and become model American youths in a modern American military academy. Still the scrappy happy hooligans, however, Leo Gorcey leads the kids, this time as a city slicker who comes to military school to show the cadets a thing or two.

Farmers are Told To Consider Cost In Purchasing Lime

While each farmer must decide upon what kind of lime to use, basing his decision on the cost, moisture content, test and fineness, soils specialists of the state in a bulletin to County Agent J. F. Magnus that the cost per year for supplying the soil with lime over a long period is the main consideration.

In counties where limestone or mail deposits occur, or where sugar beet factory waste or paper mill sludge are available, these local liming materials are usually the cheapest. They find there is no economy in paying freight on lime materials shipped long distances where good limestone materials occur in the county within reasonable hauling distances.

Most commercial companies and many local operators of lime pulvers are doing a good job of grinding. Limestone that is pulverized fine enough so that 50 per cent of the material will pass a 60-mesh screen is satisfactory, these soils workers assert. Farmers, they maintain, should insist on a reasonable degree of fineness and if in doubt as to the quality of their product, a sample should be submitted to the soils department of the University of Wisconsin for both calcium carbonate equivalent and screen test.

own. Take Miss Ormond now. I can give a shrewd guess that she started all this. She has no life of her own—and I mean none, too! She can't read—I think her eyes bother her—she has no family, and I believe she's outlived most of her friends. There isn't much for the poor old soul to do but snoop about, watching the rest of us as we go our ways."

"Are you defending her?" Brenda inquired in astonishment.

"Merely explaining her." He tossed away his cigarette. "Judge Harper's another, only his interest is more friendly than Miss Ormond's. Then there's Mrs. Arnold and her Dooney."

"Her daughter?"

He chuckled. "Her maid. She took Dorothy out of an orphan asylum more than twenty years ago. The heavy responsibility of the act still weighs on her. It was after Mr. Arnold was killed in a railroad accident and she felt she must have someone to live with her. Get Adelaide to tell you some day how long Mrs. Arnold's weighed the pros and cons of her act. It shook The Street, and Mrs. Arnold herself has never quite recovered from it."

"How old is Dorothy now, for heaven's sake?"

"Thirty-three; and the homeliest woman the Lord ever let live. But to hear Mrs. Arnold, you'd be justified in believing Dorothy to be a dream of pulchritude and her benefactor burdened with the heaviest responsibility ever placed on a woman's frail shoulders." He laughed again.

"Want to make me a bet, Brenda?" It's this Mrs. Arnold will call on you soon and ask you—sweetly and anxiously—not to do anything which might hurt a wrong influence on Dorothy. She'll say that since she's made herself responsible for Dorothy's whole social and moral welfare she simply must be on her guard against anything which even faintly hints of Bohemianism."

Brenda said in a walled voice: "I don't believe a word of this, Eric."

"A carton of cigarettes against five pounds of chocolates? Done!" He stood up. "You're in a different world now, my child. It's a pretty kind and nice world, all things considered, but . . . it needs some getting used to. You'll see!" His chuckle floated after him as he strode toward the sidewalk.

Brenda was due for one more warning before she slept. Isobel Burke knocked just as the younger girl was creaming her face. Brenda, catching sight of her in the mirror, made a little moue of defiance. "Now don't you begin, Isobel!" "M'm! So they've been at you already, have they? Who was it? The Ormonds?"

"Better ask me who it wasn't!" Isobel seated herself and viewed her small hostess with relish. "I suppose Adelaide sicked him onto it!" Then she interrupted herself to say: "You look about ten in that think, Brenda!"

Brenda glanced down at the thin peach-colored robe she wore. It was a frivolous garment, inset with lace, hand-hemmed, sleeveless and almost backless.

"It's cool!"

"It's lovely—and probably cost as much as I make in a month! I can't understand," she went on somberly, "why, with all your money—and Adelaide says you have scads!—you choose to come and live in a funny old place like this! A place," she went on oratorically, "where your business is everybody's business, where there isn't one single man, woman or child who is interesting—except Mac!—in the whole block. A place—"

And then an odd thing happened. Brenda, who had so lately castigated The Street to Mac and Eric, who had been, at the exact moment Isobel knocked, telling herself passionately that tomorrow would see her

SUNDAY'S GAMES
Kimberly at Kaukauna.
Appleton Bats at Oshkosh.
Manitowoc at Bub's.
Menasha at Appleton (Gettelmans).

LITTLE CHUTE — With all games rained out last week, managers and officials are hoping good weather Sunday will allow play in the Fox River Valley league. The Kimberly-Kaukauna fracas heads the bill. Menasha Falcons trek to Appleton to meet Gettelmans at the Fourth ward diamond. Neenah hits the highway for Manitowoc and Bubs Tavern battles Oshkosh at the Sawdust city field.

Kaukauna will be primed for a win over their rivals from down the river and hope to knock off the 1939 champs. The outburst of 21 hits including two homers and a half-dozen doubles against Menasha proves the Mellow Brewers are tough. Manager William Gantner will stick to Ray Diederick for the starting twirler with Jocko Strick receiving. Diederick came through against Menasha and will get another chance to show his wares. Wagster, a newcomer who showed at third base in the opening game, looks good and will bolster the infield.

Manager Sonny Wildenberg of the Papermakers has Lefty Behr or Boucher for mound duty. The manager will catch. Kimberly has a "murderer's row" which the opposing twirler will have to face in Tuffy Horn, Sven Bowman, Erbie and Pete Wildenberg, Artie Hofkins, and Elmer Kobs. The game is expected to attract a record crowd, with the Papermaker fans out by the hundreds.

The Falcons-Appleton Gettelmans fracas will be a tossup for the winner with both clubs practically even in strength. The Appleton squad is practically the same that copped the Winnebago title last season, with Fredericks or Norfolk on the mound and Krause on the receiving end. Menasha may have Berry or Knoll on the mound with Herb Kosloski at catch. The Kalakowski brothers, Frank and John, will have their battling togs on again. They collected homers and singles in the Kaukauna game. Magalski and Kosloski also are dangerous at the plate.

Bubs Tavern to Oshkosh
Appleton Bubs Tavern treks to Oshkosh to battle Mugerauer and Co. The Oshkosh team defeated the Gettelmans in the opening game. Klobner will toe the mound for them with Mugerauer receiving. Sabott, formerly with New London, is also a choice for pitcher. Manager Wally Murphy must find a new twirler as Lefty Greens has signed with Fond du Lac in the Class D circuit. Kelly or Cliff Burton may toe the mound. Eddie Helms will don the big mitt, with Cotton, Wonsler, Weber, Pope and Tom Murphy forming the hitting power.

Neenah treks to Manitowoc to battle the Shipbuilders. Manager Billy Handler is expected to start Wahlers, with Menning and Christoffersen in reserve. Cash or Gartzke will don the mask and mitt. The Neenah team dropped their opening to Kimberly in a close game. Butch Kohn, portly right-hander, will be on the hill for Manitowoc with Simon or Stecke on the receiving end.

SUNDAY'S GAMES

Greenville Merchants at Little Chute.

Appleton at Black Creek.

Galesburg at Nichols.

Greenville Grange at Shiocton.

Dale at Freedom.

LITTLE CHUTE—Appleton Adler Braus will be defending the Outagamie County lead when they invade Black Creek Sunday afternoon in the headliner for the weekend. Appleton won over Greenville Merchants last Sunday to gain lone possession of the top rung while Galesburg pushed Shiocton into the cellar in a 10-inning battle, 6 to 5.

The Adler Brau-Merchants contest was a battle royal with several heated debates. Manager Gene Kleos of the Braus was up in arms on a few occasions protesting decisions only to have the arbitrators turn thumbs down on him.

All other games were rained out. Sunday's battle at Black Creek will be another humdinger as no love is lost between the teams. They were last season's finalists in the championship playoff and Appleton won.

Reider Or Van Ryin
Tommy Reider or Bob Van Ryin will be on the mound for the Braus with Bill Beech receiving. Manager John Miller is expected to start for the Braus with Charlie Le Capitaine catching.

Greenville Merchants will invade the Little Chute park to open the home season for the Chutes. They have been rained out twice. The opening ceremony will have John Vande Yacht, president of the village, tossing the first ball to Gordon Shepp, president of the A. A. sponsor of the team. Red Boots or Tony "Diz" Guerts will toe the mound with Daz Van Thiel on the receiving end. Lefty Diederick, who tried out with Appleton's Class D team only to sprain his ankle before the season opened, will be in the Dutchman lineup in the outfield. Lefty led the locals in a well-earned addition to Manager Vic Hartjes' aggregation. L. Huebner will be on the invader's mound with Schultz receiving.

Baldy Hawk will hit the highway for Freedom with his Dale aggregation. Hawk is nursing three broken ribs received while at work and will be out of the lineup for a few weeks. Moley or Lefty Kaufman will toe the mound for Dale with Cornell donning the mask and mitt. Dale twirlers limited Nichols to a pair of hits in a recent encounter and will have to be reckoned with before the season is over. Plamann or Garvey will be on the hill for Freedom with Weyers behind the log.

Grange At Shiocton
Greenville Grange will trek to Shiocton to battle Johnson and company. The Shiocton still have to win a game but have been coming closer every week. Last Sunday they battled 10 innings before being subdued, 6 to 5. Palmer, former New London State leaguer, was the bat star with three for four. He had two doubles and a single. Shiocton outthrew its opponents, 11 to 8.

The Grangers will show Norman Schleutweiler an Appleton lad, and the mound. He is rated highly by last former opponents. Schleutweiler Sunday, E. Krohlow, who fanned 11 out with Class D at Appleton and was approached by a Chicago baseball scout at the Grange after a game with the Greenville Merchants a few weeks ago. Schuler will be on the receiving end of his slants. Manager Johnson of Shiocton will send Miller to the mound again and is betting on a victory. Miller has been showing class in his last few starts. Palmer will be his battering mate.

The fifth game will have Galesburg at Nichols in a "natural." Rivalry is more intense since last Monday's meeting when Nichols protested three Bonduel players who are regulars on the Galesburg team and Bonduel returned the compliment. Manager Bill Marcks will send M. Krull to the mound with J. Krull receiving. Roger Porter of the Gales may use a new find of last Sunday, E. Krohlow, who fanned 11 out with Class D at Appleton opponents. Nelson will catch.

Atlas Gives New Manager Flowers And 7-0 Victory

Team Scores Four Runs in First Inning Against Fox River

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE
Tuesday — Pond Sports versus Coated Paper (Postponed to Friday). Wires 5, Chairs 6. Atlas 7, Fox River 0.

THE Atlas Mill gave its newly elected manager, Andy Monaghan, a wreath of flowers in big league style and then presented him with a 7-0 victory over the Fox River team in the opening Industrial league game for both teams last night on Roosevelt field.

Monaghan let his team know that he would stand for no "grand stand stuff" by gently reminding the Schads who tried an unorthodox catch in the seventh inning. Schade dropped the ball.

Atlas scored four runs in the first inning on three hits and an error. They added one run in the fifth as Zapp led off with a walk, took second on Vander Velden's infield hit, and scored on Schade's single. The winners scored twice in the sixth, Cichowicz doubled and scored on Meyers' triple. Meyers came home on Mullen's infield out.

INDIANA MAY TRIP

Michigan Thinlies

'Dogfight' Predicted in Western Conference Track Meet

Evenston, Ill.—Michigan and Indiana, squared away for a team championship "dogfight" today as the 46th Western conference outdoor track and field meet swung into its qualifying program at Northwestern's Dyche stadium.

Michigan, relying once again on team balance, sent a squad of more than 20 men into the 10 preliminary tests which will be followed by tomorrow's 15-event finals program.

But even though Michigan was rated a favorite to win a fourth straight team title, Indiana was accorded a chance of ending the Michigan string largely because of the individual brilliance of Roy Cochran, sprint and hurdle star, Campbell Kane, distance ace, and Archie Harris, field events point-getter.

Six defending champions originally were expected to compete but Michigan's Ralph Schwarzkopf, two mile tilted, has been lost to Michigan because of illness. Roger Poorman, Indiana's defending javelin champion, has been handicapped by injuries but was expected to compete. Other returning champions were Michigan's Warren Breidenbach in the 440 yard dash; Cochran, Indiana, 220 yard low hurdles; Myron Fiker, Northwestern, 100 yard dash; and Ed Buxton, Wisconsin, in the half mile.

Former Tennis Ace Upsets Women's U. S. Golf Titlist

BY FELIX R. MCKNIGHT

Fort Worth, Texas — (P) — Four years ago, the acclaim from winning the national intercollegiate tennis title still coming her way, Miss Kay Pearson decided to take up golf as an off-season sideline.

Today, the 26-year-old Houston girl played in the semi-finals of the Women's Southern golf tournament, the classic of Dixie, along with three of the nation's foremost players.

She got there by defeating national champion Betty Jameson, 2 and 1, in yesterday's stunning upset.

Winner of the national intercollegiate singles and doubles tennis titles in 1935 for Rice Institute, Miss Pearson suddenly started thinking golf.

"Actually, I've played only three years of golf. One season I was recovering from an appendectomy. I can't believe I beat Betty—I was so frightened."

Today she meets Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite of Fort Worth, who gave a courageous exhibition in coming from under a three-hole deficit on the only six holes to eliminate Miss Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, Ga., one up.

Still the steadiest of the lot, however, and gradually becoming the favorite was Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C. She was 39 on the first nine to defeat Mrs. Sam Israel of New Orleans 6 and 4.

Her opponent will be defending champion Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., the stout-hearted girl with the amazing recovery shots. Miss Miley overcame a three lead which Miss Jane Cothran of Greenville, S. C., held at the end of the eighth to win, one up.

Lawrence Favors Proposed Labor Law Amendments

House Will Be Asked to Vote on Changes Within Few Days

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington, May 24.—A few days after the house of representatives will be asked to record itself on what may prove a historic vote because it is directly related to national unity and efficiency of production.

For several months now, the house has had before it certain proposals to amend the National Labor Relations act. These amendments do not in any way weaken collective bargaining or the rights of labor to organize, but they decidedly weaken the power of an arbitrary-minded tribunal to write into the law things that were never put there in the first instance by congress. Likewise, the amendments seek to give employers—who, too, have civil rights and are supposed to be treated fairly even though they are in the minority—a chance to conduct their labor relations without being harassed by misuse or abuse of the words of the statute.

The labor union politicians, working in close cooperation with the National Labor Relations board, have been conducting a lobby to persuade members of the house to leave the law unchanged. Threats of reprisals at the polls are in the background of the controversy. Republicans and Democrats alike have been asked to vote against the amendments on the ground that the labor unions did not want changes.

The position of the CIO has been to oppose all amendments. The A. F. of L. started out with amendments of its own and thought it had administration support, but it turns out that the A. F. of L. has been left isolated. Lately there have been signs that the A. F. of L. leaders will return to the position they originally took, namely, that a new labor board must be created.

Surrenders Most
The need for a more satisfactory relationship between management and labor than exists in America today is conceded on all sides. In England, it is admitted that because labor refused to cooperate voluntarily, measures of emergency had to be adopted by parliament conscripting labor and capital. But in the end it is labor that has surrendered most. So in America, if voluntary cooperation breaks down and America is forced into the war some day, labor will bear the brunt of the struggle. Can America forestall such a development by setting up now a better relationship between management and labor? The house of representatives will have to answer that question and take full responsibility for the decision next week.

It is not a difficult controversy to appraise. When, after a searching investigation by a special house committee, abuses are revealed, it is certainly not constructive for the big powerful labor politicians to ignore the abuses and endeavor to whitewash completely the wrong-doing and of openly violating the federal statutes. Members of the board have boldly confessed to violation of anti-lobbying laws and yet have never been prosecuted.

The spectacle of an administration which vigorously enforces the laws against employers and deliberately refrains from enforcing the statutes against its own employees when they violate federal law is an example of the decay of democratic government and public morality. When political expediency supercedes honest enforcement of the law, the foundation of democracy itself is made insecure.

The campaign against amending the National Labor Relations law has in itself revealed that misinterpreted statutes can be kept in force if the political lobbies are strong enough. The administration by its position thus far has committed itself to the side of unqualified endorsement of the mismanagement by the board. All the revelations of the Smith committee were brushed to one side and administration leaders are fighting against amendments. How can industry ever have confidence in any administration which so far forgets the rules of fair play in a democracy that, when unfairness is clearly proved, no redress is obtainable? How much enthusiasm can industry put into the production machine when it feels that at Washington is a group of overzealous politicians interested primarily in their own ambitions and their own maintenance of political power?

The average citizen often asks himself what he can do about it. The coming vote in the house of representatives will give him much food for thought and a stimulus to action. Every vote against unqualified retention of the National Labor Relations act, every vote made at the behest of pressure groups, can be repudiated at the polls by larger groups of the electorate who want to see a fair deal for employers as well as employees.

The question of what the senate does about it is secondary for the house must go on record first. If the house does not see the implications to national defense and efficient production in failure to correct the mistakes in the Wagner law then America must look to the voters at the polls to express in unmistakable terms this autumn the national desire for fairness and voluntary cooperation in government. It's another episode in the era of selfishness that has made democracy so weak to cope with totalitarian states.

1. UNLOADING NECESSARY EQUIPMENT

Picture above shows farmer Frank W. Andrew just as he arrives in the center of a field. His equipment includes center-pole and wheel, piano wire, and guy-wire braces. This is all the material used.

2. PIANO WIRE DRAWN TO TRACTOR

Here the center winch—made of two wheels and a pole—has been placed in the middle of the field that is to be worked. Mr. Andrew is drawing out the wire, which in turn will be fastened to the special steering arm of the tractor.

3. REVOLVING ARM HELPS WIND OR UNWIND WIRE

The revolving arm shown here is used to guide the piano wire on or off the wheel, depending on whether the tractor is working inward or outward from the center of the field. Tension keeps the wire taut and off the ground.

4. GUY-WIRES ONLY SUPPORT NECESSARY

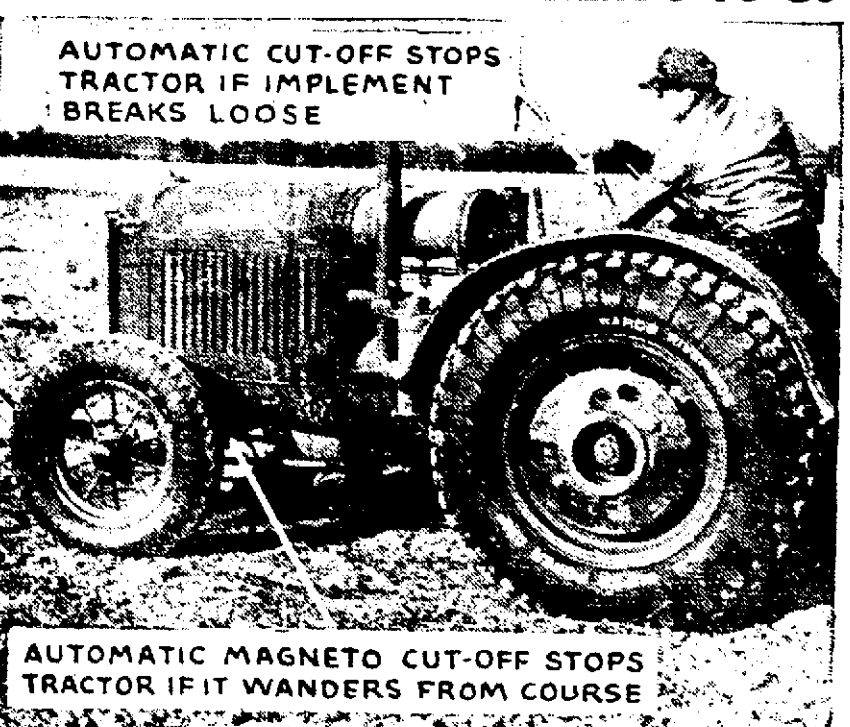

Winch "sets" in field supported only by guy-wires that are easily staked into the ground. This is all the support necessary, as there is no more pull on the center winch than there is on an auto steering wheel.

5. SPECIAL ARM USED

The next step is to fasten the guide wire to the special steering arm on the tractor. The regular steering gear is disconnected, and the special steering arm, patented by farmer Andrew, guides the tractor on its driverless way.

6. DRIVERLESS TRACTOR READY TO GO

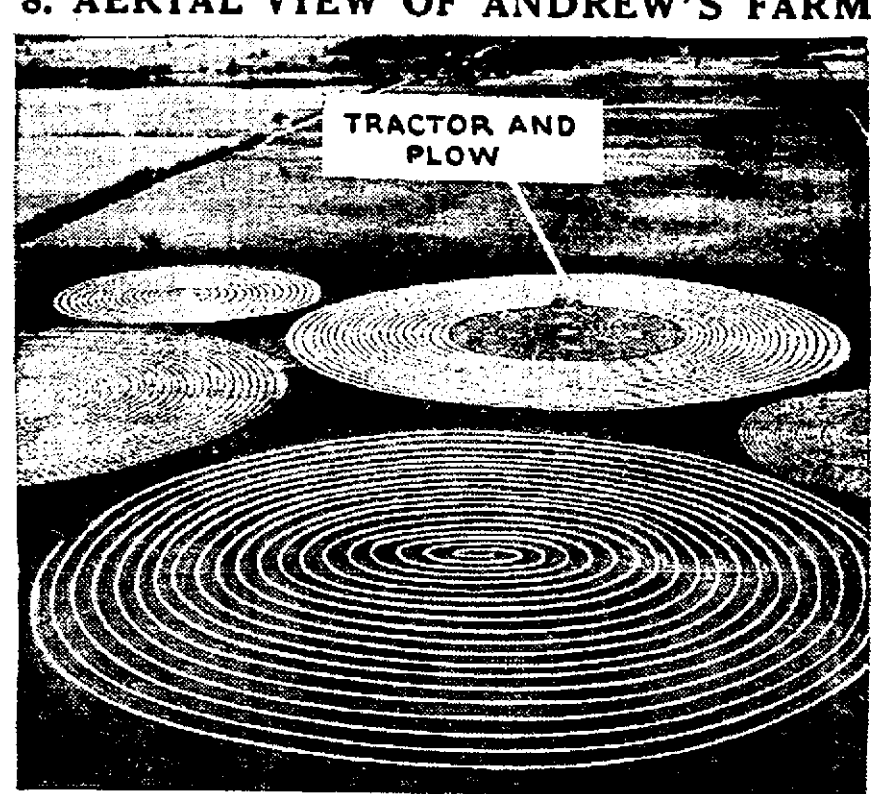

Here Mr. Andrew is about to start his rubber-tired, driverless tractor on its way. After it starts, he jumps off, and goes about other work on the farm. The two automatic devices referred to above prevent any accidents.

7. TRACTOR DOES OWN WORK

Here farmer Andrew takes one last look at his driverless tractor at work plowing while he goes into town for seed. The tractor stops automatically when it reaches the center of the field. 30 acres of Spring corn will make a row 40 miles long!

8. AERIAL VIEW OF ANDREW'S FARM

This aerial view of the Andrew farm indicates clearly some of the plowed circles in which Farmer Andrew planted his Spring crops. Lines shown in circle in foreground show how furrows run when worked spirally.

DRIVERLESS TRACTOR FARMS "IN CIRCLES"

Farmer Develops "Robot"-Gadget That Plows, Seeds and Cultivates

Many interesting stories and letters find their way to the big mail order houses, but few in recent years can compare with the account of a Montgomery Ward customer, Frank Andrew, of Palmyra, Illinois whose "circular" farm includes a 30 acre field in which one row of corn will extend 40 miles!

PERSONAL INTERVIEW
Since Wards count millions of farmers as their customers, the news about this revolutionary form of farming proved highly interesting to the mail order people, and they immediately sent a reporter and photographer to the southern Illinois farm to get the low-down on "circular" farming. The results of this interview are given on this page with pictures in an exclusive story to your newspaper as follows:—

WARDS INQUIRING REPORTER

REPORTER—"Just how long have you been working your farm 'in circles'?"

MR. ANDREW—"A little more than two years. You see, while I was attending the University of Illinois Agricultural School, I had some original ideas about this business of farming. I couldn't see why a farmer had to run a tractor up and down a field all day when he could be doing something else."

QUESTION—"Well, Mr. Andrew, what did you do about it?"

ANSWER—"After finishing at the university, I came back home to manage my mother's farm. It was then that I got my chance to work out the idea I had in the back of my mind."

QUESTION—"Suppose you explain again just what that idea was."

ANSWER—"It's very simple. In fact it cost me less than $10 to make the idea work. It's just this. I set up an elevated wheel in the center of my field and attach a piano wire from it to a special steering device on my tractor. After that, I just start the tractor and it winds itself on the wheel in a spiral until it gets to the center of the field where the tractor shuts off automatically."

QUESTION—"That certainly does sound simple. But what about this automatic shut-off you just mentioned?"

ANSWER—"It's a cut-off I've patented, connected with the magneto of my tractor. You see, we have to anticipate a possible accident and be prepared for it. Maybe some day the piano wire connecting the center wheel and the steering apparatus on the tractor will break—if it does the tractor motor will stop automatically. Or maybe the tractor wheels will hit a rut and be thrown out of line, any happening such as that, will also stop the tractor."

QUESTION—"I suppose the cut-off would also take care of any other accidents—like, say an implement dropping off the tow-bar?"

ANSWER—"Yes, there's another cut-off attached to the implements that would stop the tractor before it could make a round of the field and damage the implement."

Plants "Corners" in Hay

QUESTION—"Just how large a farm do you have, Mr. Andrew?"

ANSWER—"There are 88 acres that can be worked."

QUESTION—"When you plow and cultivate in circles, Mr. Andrew, you can't farm all of the land—how do you work that angle?"

ANSWER—"I find that I can utilize all but 22% of the 88 acres I farm. Since my requirements are like most farmers who put 25% of their land into hay and alfalfa, requiring no cultivation, I just let my 'corners' stand in meadow, too."

QUESTION—"Tell me, do you have any trouble with the piano wire you use? What I mean is, does the weight of the wire cause it to sag?"

ANSWER—"No, it doesn't. The total weight of the wire is only about 31½ pounds, in spite of its length of 40 rods, and there is always enough tension between the tractor and the wheel to keep the wire from sagging."

QUESTION—"Tell us a little about what your tractor and new method of farming will do."

ANSWER—"Well, it will, of course, save me a lot of time. Why, I can be doing handy jobs around the farm while my tractor is cultivating my fields. Then, there's the matter of accuracy and precision—the little gadget makes it possible to plant and later cultivate the same row without any deviation. And, by the way, that reminds me, there are no 'dead' furrows when I use this new method of spiral farming. A farmer with two tractors can have one outfit working in the circle while he drives the other tractor in the 'corner' areas. Then, too, 'night' farming on the driverless tractor requires no lights."

QUESTION—"How do you handle the width of crop-rows?"

ANSWER—"That's simple—if I want a 42 inch crop-row, I just use a rim with a 42 inch circumference on the center pole. That's more accurate than plowing the old way."

QUESTION—"What about harvesting—will you be able to reap by using this new method?"

ANSWER—"Yes, that's practical. You see, I'll simply work the tractor from the inside of the circle, outward."

QUESTION—"That all sounds interesting but aren't there some things that this tractor will not do?"

ANSWER—"Yes, I guess there are. It's just a little helpless when the plow gets clogged with stalks or weeds and I'm not sure that it would work so well on a rolling field."

QUESTION—"One more question. Mr. Andrew... those new pneumatic tires on your tractor... do you find them practical?"

ANSWER—"Yes, indeed. Those Ward tires already have cut my fuel-costs plenty and get the work done much faster with less strain on the control wire and more precision in actual operation. What's more, they don't pack the seed bed."

WARDS INQUIRING REPORTER

REPORTER—"Thank you, Mr. Andrew, I'm sure the farmers of America will be glad to get this latest inside information on your new method of farming."

BLOWGUN HUNTING

Natives of Borneo think cock-fighting is a great sport. When the time comes for a fight, a knife about three inches long is placed on one leg of each bird. The other leg has no "metal spur," being armed only with the spur which Nature supplied.

Borneo children in front of their home.

Another sport of the Dyaks is hunting with a blowgun. This weapon has been used in Borneo for time untold.

Through trade with white men, the Dyaks have obtained iron drills, and these drills are used nowadays in boring the blowguns.

The iron drill used for this purpose is a long rod with a "bit" at one end. It is forced through a section of a tree limb, making a bore about eight feet long and a quarter of an inch in diameter.

The wood around the bore is cut down until it has a diameter of about one inch. Then it is scraped smooth on the outside.

Arrows, or darts, for a blowgun are very small. In fact they have a thickness of hardly an eighth of an inch. They are about 10 inches long.

One end of the arrow is sharpened. The other end is covered with a bit of soft, spongy wood. This makes the arrow bulge out at the rear so it will just fill the space inside the bore of the blowgun. The weapon would not work if air went past the arrow.

The sharp end of the arrow is dipped into a poison obtained from a plant. Often the poison juice is taken from the sap of the upas tree.

At a distance of 60 or 75 feet, a good Dyak marksman can bring down a bird the size of a sparrow.

The arrow will carry to a distance of 100 or 150 feet, but it is not possible to have the best aim at such distance.

4 Men Arrested While Convoying Shipment of Milk

Illinois Authorities Attempting to Curb Strike Violence

Chicago—(P)—Four men conveying a $4,000 milk shipment were held in Waukegan, Ill., for investigation today as authorities strove to curb violence attendant to Chicago's six-day-old milk strike.

Hopes for an immediate settlement waned with the breakup of a conference between representatives of the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., major distributors organization, and the milk wagon drivers' union after seven hours of fruitless debate.

Walter L. Atkinson, acting sheriff of Lake county, said the four men seized were employed by the independent Meadowmoor Dairy, and that a .45 caliber pistol with a sawed-off barrel was found in their automobile.

The men, seized at the junction of Highways 173 and 59 near Antioch, gave their names as John Louis, 36, 1007 S. Campbell avenue, Chicago; Albert Savarino, 38, 7220 S. Marquette avenue, Forest Park; Joe Demarco, 38, 2453 N. Taylor street, Chicago; and George Zito, 29, 903 S. Paulina avenue, Chicago.

Atkinson said the men apparently had met the 12 tank trucks at Genoa City, Wis., to convey it to Chicago. Deputy sheriffs escorted the shipment after the men were arrested.

Drivers quit work Sunday when the dealers ordered a reduced wage scale. The milk supply in the metropolitan area today was estimated at 20 per cent of normal.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly and State Attorney Thomas J. Courtney attended the all-night conference in a joint statement they said they did everything possible to effect a settlement, but could not get the conferees to agree. No arrangements were made for another conference.

Dealers suggested that the drivers work at the old wage scale of $48 per week until May 29 when they would vote on the question of arbitration. Union officials demanded that the date be extended to June 8 and that drivers be paid for time lost during the strike. At this point the conference ended.

New outbreaks of violence were reported even as conferees attempted to settle the dispute. Police seized five men from a group of 40 which dumped 450 gallons of milk being delivered to a dairy plant.

Additional milk stores reported window smashings. The police said the windows of 110 stores had been broken by looting gangs in the last two days.

Knowing Signals Isn't Proof of Good Driver.

Safety Expert Says

Lansing—(P)—When a motorist signals for a turn or stop he is being courteous—but he also is attempting to "pass the buck" in case of an accident, says J. Willard Lord, safety engineer for a Philadelphia oil company.

Addressing a state safety conference here, Lord argued that too much emphasis in safety education is placed on signals and not enough on teaching motorists to notice their position on the road. He said:

"Horn-sounding by a motorist approaching an intersection makes him feel he has fairly placed at least a partial responsibility on the other fellow to slow down."

The driver who sticks out his arm and pulls away from the curb without looking "feels he has warned the other fellow and that it's up to the latter to look out for him."

Rear-end collisions are not the fault of the forward stopping too quickly, but of the following driver failing to have his car under control.

"Hand signals are a distraction from the business of driving safely."

Broker Admits Bad Practices, But Pleads for Permit Because He Favored New Regulations

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The state securities department and its new director, Vernon Zeller, today studied aspects of what is probably the most curious case ever to be developed in the history of state regulation of securities sales.

A decision is expected within a few days on the question of revoking the dealer's license of Barney Johnson and Company, which maintains branch offices in several Wisconsin cities and which at a hearing this week admitted state charges that it has violated the state blue sky laws by asking to be allowed to continue in business.

Walter L. Atkinson, acting sheriff of Lake county, said the four men seized were employed by the independent Meadowmoor Dairy, and that a .45 caliber pistol with a sawed-off barrel was found in their automobile.

Clausen Assails New Deal as He Proposes Program

Delivers Keynote Address At Meeting of Young Republicans

Eau Claire—(P)—Fred H. Clausen, keynoting the Wisconsin Young Republicans' convention today, denounced the New Deal's administration and declared that "if you or I made a relatively like showing on our jobs we would expect to be thrown out on our ears."

"And we would deserve to be," Clausen added in an address prepared for delivery at the convention's afternoon session.

"Well, friends, that's your job in November and the Young Republicans of Wisconsin will take part in the ceremony."

Clausen, a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, substituted in the keynote spot for Senator Styles Bridges (R-N. H.) who was unable to fill the engagement.

He presented the following program "as a challenge to the good judgment of our citizens to maintain our institutions and a representative form of popular government."

Proposes Program
Resolve that national solvency can come only from common sense financial housekeeping; insist that the American system of private enterprise is the only one that can produce increased employment and economic progress; prevent a monopoly of governmental power in the executive; establish the relationship of worker and employer as one of cooperation for their mutual welfare; restore to the states their rights of self-determination in local affairs; demand protection and enlargement of markets for our farmers and repeal the reciprocal trade treaties; demand the return of actual control and responsibility for government expenditures to congress; demand the administration of relief through local channels; restore confidence in the American system of private enterprise for the purpose of making more jobs in industry and commerce.

"You speak of the destiny of this Nation," Clausen said, "What greater destiny could be ours than to protect and defend representative Republican government in this country and on this side of the Atlantic when everywhere else it appears to be crumbling? That is our obligation and opportunity of this day and hour."

Open Primary Issue
The Young Republicans blazed the way for an open primary at Oshkosh two years ago and that question was scheduled to come up for debate again tomorrow when the delegates will decide on what the regular state convention at Green Bay next weekend.

Hours before the convention opened, partisans supporting Robert K. Henry, Jefferson banker, as a candidate for governor, unfurled "Henry for governor" banners around convention headquarters.

Henry was here for the first session of the convention.

Governor Julius P. Heil, candidate for re-nomination, and an advocate of an open primary, was scheduled to arrive later in the day along with other state officials.

The governor will speak at a banquet session tonight, which may be a prelude to an action taken on the question of endorsing candidates.

Many of the delegates predicted the Young Republicans would follow the same policies adopted at Oshkosh in 1938.

Richard McMillan of Fond du Lac who has served two terms as state chairman of the organization, was a candidate for reelection. He was opposed by William McEwen of River Falls, chairman of Pierce county Republicans.

McEwen's supporters based their opposition against McMillan on the claim he should not have a third term.

Dr. F. L. Gullickson of West Salem, chairman of the state central committee and executive committee, will speak to the convention tomorrow.

Plan Restoration of Surgeon's Quarters At Fort Winnebago

Milwaukee—(P)—Mrs. Vincent W. Koch of Janesville, has been chosen chairman of the Daughters of the American Revolution committee to plan the restoration of the old surgeon's quarters at Fort Winnebago.

The surgeon's quarters is the only remaining building on the site of old Fort Winnebago, built in 1828 by Lewis Jefferson Davis, a later president of the confederacy, was in charge of the building operation.

The building is across the Fox river from the old agency house which was restored by the Colonial Dames.

Mrs. Koch said the DAR had received a contribution toward the restoration from James Flint of Farmington, Me., whose mother was born in the building.

CHICAGO POULTRY
Chicago—(P)—Poultry, 1.45, 45, trucks, heavy springs steady, balance easy; hens 5 lbs. and under 15; leghorns 12; broilers colored, 19; Plymouth rocks 21 white rocks, 21; springs 4 lbs. up colored 24; Plymouth rocks 27, under 4 lbs. colored 22; Plymouth rocks 23, white rocks 22; other prices unchanged.

Given to the Works Progress Administration which taught more than 11,000 persons to read and write during the last four years, Hambrecht said.

"Provided the present number of teachers is maintained or at least not seriously reduced, illiteracy is definitely on the way out," he added.

GRIN AND BEAR IT

"I know it's asking a lot of a man who's engaged in seven price controls. Bascomb, but if you can spare the time, would you check this silly order?"

Prices of Wheat Gain in Nervous, Sluggish Session

Stock Rally, Report of Stem Rust Cause Late Buying

Chicago—(P)—Grain traders who sold or otherwise eliminated their market positions in the drastic liquidation since the start of Germany's western drive in Europe showed little inclination to re-enter the market in today's session.

The result was an unusually quiet trade characterized by nervous and narrow price fluctuations, although wheat closed with net gains of more than a cent. A rally in stocks, and reports that stem rust has spread northward, caused some late buying.

Receipts were: wheat 31 cars; corn 61; oats 55.

Wheat closed 1-11 cents higher than yesterday, July 83 1/2, September 83 1/2; corn 1-1 up, July 62 1/2, September 61 1/2; oats 1-1 higher.

U. S. Parties are Going to Fight It Out, War or No War

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Over here on the political front it's no money war either. The two parties apparently are going to fight out the presidential campaign, war or no war in Europe.

President Roosevelt has tried to set up a coalition cabinet to include three Republicans. But the effort backfired and instead he now finds himself exposed to a new attack on the third-term issue, which had almost been forgotten, even by Dorothy Thompson.

Clapper

That is the upshot of a series of fast-moving political episodes backstage in which Mr. Roosevelt, a master of astute politics, has been outmaneuvered by Alf Landon, the country boy from Kansas.

Mr. Roosevelt last week invited Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago to take a place in the cabinet. Governor Landon was then invited to come to Washington. The coalition move was gaining ground and the Republican party was in danger of being demoralized by what some of them called the Roosevelt Trojan-horse tactics.

Although most of the Republican leaders were standing pat against having any part in a coalition, the idea was making some headway and considerable rank-and-file sentiment was developing under the terrific impact of the appalling reverses in Europe. The Republicans faced demoralization.

Sunday night Governor Landon issued a statement at Topeka, rejecting the coalition idea emphatically. The 1936 presidential candidate urged the Republican party to carry on in the traditional party processes. The White House then suggested, so it was reported here, that the invitation to Governor Landon be rescinded, although he was actually on his way to Washington. On second thought, however, Mr. Roosevelt personally renewed his invitation—although it was obvious that Governor Landon's Sunday night statement against a coalition had wrecked the chances of Mr. Roosevelt's plan to bring three Republicans into his cabinet.

Whole Thing Gets In Way Of Defense Work

Governor Landon came on to Washington and had a pleasant luncheon visit with Mr. Roosevelt. He told a press conference that Mr. Roosevelt had made him no offer of a position in the government. Then he issued a statement which showed the third-term issue back into the center of the stage, saying that any Republican leader who accepted an administrative appointment would necessarily be making himself a party to a third-term move, in the absence of any action by President Roosevelt to eliminate himself.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt's blitzkrieg on the Republicans has collapsed. More than that, it has produced a counter-attack. The Republicans are out again with their squirrel gun.

The whole thing has been a lot of unnecessary nonsense, a lot of the way of real mobilization of American industry for the heavy task ahead. A Republican in the cabinet isn't going to do the trick. Three Republicans wouldn't do it. Such a situation would lead only to endless suspicions, sniping, buck-passing and everything else that is not helpful.

Now the White House is thinking of appointing three more anonymous executive assistants, under the reorganization act which authorizes Mr. Roosevelt to appoint six. Two years have gone by and three of the six places have not been filled. These wouldn't do the job either, since they are only leg-men for the president.

What is needed is a big-league industrial administrator, a single man or else a board such as Senator Austin has proposed, selected without regard to politics and chosen purely because of industrial executive ability. The defense job is

Licensed Driver Must Accompany Beginners

Captain Charles Steidl of the county traffic squad today warned persons learning to drive an automobile against operating a car without a licensed driver with them. Steidl said a number of new drivers have called at the county traffic headquarters to take a driving test and have not been accompanied by a licensed driver. This practice is a violation of the law, he said.

Potential Seaplane Bases are Surveyed

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — Under instructions of the state conservation commission, employees of the conservation department are making a survey of potential seaplane landing bases in northern Wisconsin, it was reported here yesterday.

The commission directed the study to determine the possible uses of such facilities for forest fire control, and also as an aid to increasing tourist traffic in the northern Wisconsin recreational areas.

BARN DOOR IS LOCKED

Longview, Wash. (AP)—Hugh Little, roomer at a lumbermen's hotel, always shuts the window when he takes a nap now.

While Little was sleeping recently, a stray cat crawled into the room and had six kittens on the bed. To have anything less would be like mounting a drugstore cowboy on a well-trained horse.
